BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED GIFT BOOKS

By James Whitcomb Riley HOME AGAIN WITH ME

Uniform with "An Old Sweetheart of Mine"

In all the range of Mr. Riley's verse, this was thought the one poem best qualified to follow in the series with the world-famous "Old Sweetheart" and "Aunt Mary." It has, in lavish measure, the romantic Riley emotion, the sly Riley humor, the tender Riley pathos.

More than forty pictures by Howard Chandler Christy. In a box, $2.00

A New Deer Creek Volume SONGS OF SUMMER

A new and beautiful illustrated gift collection of the cream of Riley. This latest addition to the famous Deer Creek Series contains his loveliest and best-beloved poems about summer and the outdoor summer-land. No matter what the season, no matter how the wind may blow, this book takes us back at once to glad boyhood and puts us "knee deep in June."

With Hoosier pictures in color by Will Vawter. Cloth, $1.25

THE RILEY-BETTS BOOKS FOR CHILDREN

THE ORPHANT ANNIE BOOK

The enthusiastic welcome accorded "The Raggedy Man" has led to the publication of another book, as large and even more beautiful. For text, a counterpart has been found in the poems about that famous little orphan girl who told of the goblins that git you ef you don't watch out.

Profusely illustrated and decorated in colors by Ethel Franklin Betts. Size, 11 x 12 inches. Cloth, $1.50 net.

THE RAGGEDY MAN

In this exquisite volume are assembled the several poems that relate the deeds, exploits, jests and humors of the favorite Riley character beloved by children the land over, the hero of every nursery. Miss Betts has made the picture pages alive with gay colors.

Pictures in full color by Miss Betts
Size, 11 x 12 inches.
Cloth, $1.50 net.

By Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews The Better Treasure

That perfect art which made "The Perfect Tribute" has here wrought a Christmas story imbued with all the immemorial Christmas beauty. Children are in it and home-coming and reconciliation and glad good-will.

Elaborately decorated and illustrated by
H. M. Bunker. $1.50.

By Henry Wallace Phillips The Mascot of Sweetbriar Gulch

Author of "Red Saunders"

A simple, direct elemental story that gets you in its grip, that touches your heart with its pathos and its joy.

So rich in humor and true to the best in human nature, you are sure the world's a happy place to live in.

Nine pictures in color by F. Graham Cootes.
$1.50.

The Most Gorgeous Gift Book A Book of Sweethearts

Radiant with the loveliness of lovely women, fragrant as a rose in its beauty, "A Book of Sweethearts" stands easily first among gift books. Each picture is a climax of charm and color. Each illustrates a famous toast to the light that lies in woman's eyes. Each is the head of a beautiful girl. Each is the work of an artist whose "girls" have made him supremely popular the land over.

Howard Chandler Christy, Harrison Fisher, Will Grefe, Clarence F. Underwood, Lester Ralph, F. Graham Cootes. Quarto, bound in cloth. In a box, $2.50.

By Brian Hooker The Right Man

This is the tale of one girl and two men, and of the strife of the two for the one. It is a battle royal of true steel against unyielding iron, with victory ever hovering in the balance. Brilliant and unconventional "The Right Man" is the best of company.

With nine pictures in color photogravure by Alonzo Kimball. $1.50

Poetry and Drama

Ready December 15

THE FAITH HEALER

By

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY

Author of "The Great Divide"

A strong, optimistic drama; a drama of life, and of the soul. It is as absorbing as "The Great Divide," Mr. Moody's first play, while in its vital relation to some of the many wide-spread intellectual movements of the day, it has deeper significance and a more compelling message. This play will be produced in December.

THE ENDURING NOVELIST

Ralph Connor

Writes the biography of the man who inspired his famous tales

The Life of
James Robertson

By CHARLES W. GORDON (Ralph Connor)

Illustrated, Net, $1.50

Read any of Ralph Connor's famous stories and you will feel the influence of this man who loved, believed in, toiled for, and died for his Northwest Country. Ralph Connor freely admits having drawn much of his material from the life of Dr. Robertson, who for twenty-five crowded years was superintendent of the Canadian West.

"Dr. Robertson was the inspirer, director and backer of all the sturdy 'Sky Pilots' who went out into the Northwest and fought for the men in the mines and forests of that new country."—Buffalo Express.

A MORE exquisitely decorated edition of a novelist's work would be hard to find. Each volume has its own individual motive for decoration but all in general harmony with the series. Miss McClure in this de luxe edition of Ralph Connor's work has caught his spirit, and her sketches have drawn forth his continued delight.

Ralph Connor's New Christmas Tale
The Angel and the Star

Ralph Connor has turned his facile pen to a fascinating portrayal of the birth of Christ. Written in the author's inimitable vein it is an inspiring story. It reflects the spirit of the times, bringing a vivid realization of the events of that wonderful night. The tale itself is not long. Around the story of the first Christmas night, the gifted novelist has woven his fancy, in a prose poem of sacred imagination.

Thoreau's CAPE COD

With profuse illustrations from the camera of CLIFTON JOHNSON

The N. Y. TIMES REVIEW says: "It was a happy thought of Clifton Johnson's to give us a new edition of 'Cape Cod' with photographic illustrations, and his happy thought has materialized in delightful fashion. Following as closely as possible the path that Thoreau trod, and striving all the while to see the things that Thoreau saw and described, Mr. Johnson, with the aid of an excellent camera, has been able to procure some charming pictures which are distinctly illustrative of Thoreau's work."

The BOSTON HERALD says: "The photographs, which are the special feature of this new edition, are exceedingly happy. The volume is well printed and the illustrations admirably reproduced."

The N. Y. SUN says: The photographs are good, and in excellent taste. The page is very attractive."

8vo, Decorated Cloth, $2.00 net. (Postage 20 cts.)

Maeterlinck's PELLEAS AND MELISANDE

Translated by ERVING WINSLOW. With introduction by MONTROSE J. MOSES. Profusely illustrated with scenes from the opera and portraits of Miss Garden. Hand colored photogravure frontispiece.

The SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN says: "This is an exquisite and sumptuous edition which will find an eager welcome among music lovers whose fancy has been redirected to the Belgian poet's mystic drama. The translation is both sympathetic and faithful; the introduction valuable and illuminating."

The JEWISH EXPONENT says: "A distinctive edition of a famous play."

The THACKERAY POCKET BOOK

By ADELAIDE RAWNSLY FOSSARD

Limp Leather, 75 Cents net.

Quotations and selections from the novels and essays of Thackeray along the same lines and in the same form as "The Pocket R. L. S." and "The Meredith Pocket Book." Thackeray's brilliant and profound observations on life and the world, men, manners, society, love and death, have been chosen and arranged topically with great skill and tact by the editor.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

Doubleday, Page & Co.

Fourth Large Edition of the big, splendid romance of the open

By Stewart Edward White THE RIVERMAN

Fourteen illustrations in tint by Wyeth and Underwood. $1.50.

THERE is a thrill in knowing such a character as John Orde, the quiet, masterful leader of men who dominates these pages. He is one of Nature's own, a man's man, a prince of log-drivers, and a product of the forest country that bred him.

One breathes faster as he reads this tremendously virile story of the hazardous life of the "white-water" men, of strenuous struggles with Nature's forces, of plans to achieve and plots to ruin, and of a strong man's fight against the machinations of a disloyal partner.

"A story that stirs the blood like martial music or the sound of strong winds in swaying tree-tops." Chicago Record Herald.

"A big story and a healthy story, one to read more than once and to be given a dignified place in that department of any man's library devoted to fiction which is more than ephemeral." Boston Transcript.

The successor to "The Blazed Trail"

"The romance, the rough life, the strenuous fight, the cold, the danger, the grit and courage of the men, their feats of daring, their rude but effective codes of honor; all that goes to make up a riverman's life, is set forth with the vivid strokes that make a picture live."

St. Louis Times.

JOSEPH CONRAD

Author of "Youth," "Lord Jim," etc.

The Point of Honor

An episode of the Napoleonic wars dealing with two officers who became estranged for no evident reason, and engaged in so many duels that their enmity became a tradition in the army. It is a gem of a story, "swifter in movement than 'Nostromo.' He is a stylist of distinction." (N. Y. Evening Post.)

Four illustrations. $1.25.

ANTHONY HOPE

Author of "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Prisoner of Zenda," etc.

The Great Miss Driver

The most delightful novel we have had from Anthony Hope in years. It is a remarkable story of a remarkable girl, "the best and most unconventional heroine in recent fiction." "Anthony Hope has at last written a novel that might almost be called great." (Rochester Post-Express.)

In no other story of his have the elements of fascinating plot, romantic interest and convincing atmosphere been blended so effectively and with such art as in

THE GUEST OF QUESNAY

"It is far and away the best story Mr. Booth Tarkington has given us," says the New York American. "The writing is exquisitely finished; the reading leaves an abiding memory of a tender fragrance." "The story is admirable." New York Sun.

O. HENRY

Author of "The Four Millions," "The Trimmed Lamp," etc.

The Gentle Gaffer

The new O. Henry book. Inimitably funny stories of the grafting operations of Jeff Peters and his partner, Andy Tucker, that permit O. Henry to give free reign to his own unapproachable brand of native American humor. "O. Henry's stories simply have to be read; there are none others like them." (Brooklyn Standard-Union.)

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY

39-41 CHAMBERS STREET, NEW YORK

WHY

did the New York Times in its review of Walter Prichard Eaton's "The American Stage of To-day" say:

"Mr. Eaton's book, by the way, has just acquired a sort of 'news value.' It now possesses an interest apart from its subject and its quality."

BECAUSE:

☞ Just the other day—on the very eve of the publication of the book in fact—Mr. Eaton was discharged from his position as the dramatic critic of the New York Sun.

☞ In Life of November 12th, "Metcalf" said: "It would be well for our stage if every theatregoer in New York should study Mr. Eaton's book. And, best of all, it would be a great thing if every manager with box-office standards should be locked in a padded cell until he could repeat 'The American Stage of To-day' from memory." Mr. Metcalf also said: "As there is no question of Mr. Eaton's honesty, knowledge and ability to judge and write entertainingly concerning the stage, the readers of the Sun will doubtless watch the columns of that journal with the idea of learning just why this accomplished and fair-minded critic was removed from his position."

☞ In Life of November 19th, "Metcalf" again takes up this question in a long article in the course of which he alleges that Mr. Eaton's discharge from the Sun was due to the fact that his criticisms of certain performances "did not exactly conciliate the theatrical advertisers."

☞ The appearance of this article was followed immediately by the announcement in the Sun that action for libel would be at once commenced by its attorney against Life Publishing Company.

NOW:

☞ Every theatregoer in New York, in fact theatregoers all over the United States will follow the outcome of this case with the deepest interest, and will want to be familiar with the much-discussed Mr. Eaton's book.

The House Dignified Its Design, Arrangement and Decoration

By L. H. FRENCH. Very fully illustrated. Large 8vo. Ornamental Cover, $5.00 net.

Miss French's book brings out the correct and guiding principles that should be in the mind of all who are building houses, great or small—principles that underlie designs, arrangement, and decoration. The volume is both a mine of general information and an invaluable miscellany of detailed practical hints and suggestions. The illustrations are particularly fine.

"If the scheme is completed as worthily as it has been begun, Signor Ferrero will have written a more living, a more actual history of Rome than any that has yet been produced. . . . The book is one that can only be put down reluctantly and with a sense of gratitude to the author."—The Academy.

The Heart of a Geisha

By MRS. HUGH FRASER. With a Frontispiece in Color by Ludwig Holberg and Ornamental Borders and Decorations by R. Weir Crouch. 8vo. Beautifully printed and bound. $2.00.

A romantic story of Japan, particularly noteworthy for its interesting account of Geisha life. The description of the dance by which the Geisha saved the life of her lover, a young noble attached to the cause of the Mikado in the days preceding his triumph over the Shogun, when such devotion meant imminent danger to one's life and liberty, is a remarkable bit of description, and forms the climax to a very dramatic tale.

A Commentary

By JOHN GALSWORTHY. Uniform with "The Country House." Crown, 8vo. $1.50.

"A book full of true ideas about life, told in Mr. Galsworthy's characteristic manner. He seems to button-hole the reader and command his attention until he has finished. He does not deal in half measures, he says what he feels from the bottom of his heart. . . . Always clever and thoughtful."—The Daily News.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANY will publish at once a "Life of Lincoln," by Henry K. Whitney, who travelled with Lincoln for a number of years on the circuit, and was closely associated with him in his law business. When Lincoln was President he appointed Mr. Whitney paymaster, a position which he held for years. The first volume of Mr. Whitney's work treats of "Lincoln the Citizen," the second volume of "Lincoln the President." Both volumes are illustrated.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. have just brought out a new book by Andrew Carnegie, entitled "Problems of To-day," which deals with such subjects as wealth, labor and wages. Some have asserted that the book was evidently written with the intention of stemming, (not swelling, as the printer made us say in a recent issue,) the tide of Socialism, although Mr. Carnegie most frankly admits the truth of the Socialist's loudest complaint, which is the unequal distribution of wealth. The last chapter of Mr. Carnegie's book is entitled "My Experience with Railway Rates and Rebates."

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY publish this week two new books of popular scientific interest. The first of these is "The Zonal-Belt Hypothesis," by Joseph T. Wheeler, a new explanation of the cause of the Ice ages, which, while couched in the most careful scientific language, will appeal to the general reader because of its originality. The other, "Phrenology; or, the Doctrine of the Mental Phenomena," by J. G. Spurzheim, M.D., is a reprint of one of the most important books dealing with the subject, originally published more than seventy-five years ago, but which has been out of print for many years. The new edition has been edited by Cyrus Elder, who has also prepared a full introduction.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have just published Frederick W. Watkeys's "Old Edinburgh," David M. Preyer's "The Art of the Netherland Galleries," and Mrs. Florence Kimball Russel's "In West Point Grey," all announced some time ago, and Mrs. Helen Eggleston Haskell's "O-Heart-San," the story of a Japanese maiden with truly Japanese good qualities, such as knowing exactly how to apply rice powder and rouge, and how to behave when suddenly called into the imperial presence. The little lady emulates the noble maiden who killed herself to assuage the imperial grief when Prince George of Russia was assaulted at Kioto, but she was not allowed to complete her sacrifice, and the story ends in accordance with Western ideals.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready a volume on "The Philosophy of Self-Help," by Stanton Davis Kirkham, which is designed to show how, by a training and use of the mind, it is possible for every one to secure at least a large measure of mental health and well-being. They will bring out next week "Fighting the Turk in the Balkans," by Arthur D. Howden Smith, a book that smells of powder, written by a young newspaper correspondent who wearied of the quiet life and joined a band of Macedonian guerillas, fighting with them against the Turk; "The Sloops of the Hudson," by William E. Verplanck and Moses W. Collyer, a history of the packet sloop of the last century, and their names, together with reminiscences of several notable North River sailing masters; also, a book on "Beverages," by Edward R. Emerson, based on exhaustive research, and giving an account of the many and varied drinks which have from the age of myths to the present made glad the heart of man.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

North Carolina has published 26,000 volumes of 1000 pages each, and from these state documents, which he assisted in gathering, the author has drawn his exhaustive history. He feels it his duty to do this great work for his state since those he considers more competent have not the required time. He divides the 200 years covered in this volume into 6 epochs and the 6th epoch ends in September, 1783, when Great Britain formally acknowledged the United States and North Carolina entered upon her career as a separate, distinct and sovereign state.

Author is not a soldier. He gathered his knowledge of the Caucasian tribes, of their superstitions and prejudices, songs and legends at first hand, and sought to complete it from books. In all the voluminous literature of the Caucasus he found no complete history of the Conquest. He aims to supply this want for English-speaking readers by this statement of facts, soberly written and free from bias.

Baird, H. Carey. The South: shall it ever become so far civilized as to be fit for a Republican form of government, obedient to the constitution and the laws, and pervaded by such a public opinion as shall enforce true citizenship? or shall we for another seventy-five years be subject to its vicious legislation, its turbulence and its wars? Answer: the Dingley tariff, causing the development of the vast mineral and other resources of the southern states, through work and wages, nearer and greater markets, wealth and power, is solving this supreme national problem, unsolved for 125 years of independence; therefore hands off the Dingley tariff! so overflowing with good gifts, among the greatest the hope of the preservation of our free institutions and our liberties; addressed in criticism of his economic views and recommendations to President Roosevelt, by way of warning. Presents the Hungarian point of view to English readers in picturesque form. The great desire of the Magyars to appear to advantage before Englishmen has not blinded the author to their defects and he has unsparingly criticized them after profiting by their unbounded hospitality to gain his information. He specially dwells upon the many nationalities inhabiting Hungary and their great influence in bringing about present political conditions and keeping up the most varied social and family customs. His concluding chapter on the Future of Hungary is full of food for deep thought.

The author, member of the New York Bar, treats the trials of Jesus, the Hebrew one before the Great Sanhedrin and the Roman one before Pontius Pilate, just as the great trials of the world have been treated: Trial of Socrates; Charles I. of England; Warren Hastings; Aaron Burr; Alfred Dreyfus, etc. This work represents enormous, painstaking labor, exact legal erudition, discriminating judgment and spiritual instruction. Representative lawyers and clergymen have pronounced it a needed contribution to theological learning. Illustrated with reproductions of celebrated paintings. Incidentally contains a fine tribute to the Jews. Bibliography (5 p.).

Clark, Felicia Buttz. The Jesuit. N. Y., Eaton & Mains, [1908.] c. 3+282 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Rome is the scene. Rome since Pius X. became pope. A rich American family consisting of a mother and two daughters come as tourists, and under the spell of the natural and spiritual beauties of Rome remain for a time. One daughter goes over to the Catholic church and becomes a nun on the eve of matrimony. The details of the quiet, unceasing work for the church of her Jesuit priests and those who come under their insidious influence make the story, written, of course, from the Protestant standpoint.

The object of the author in preparing this book has been to present the myths which are interesting to read and which are at the same time best adapted to establish a foundation for the fascinating study of comparative mythology. The stories have been drawn from all sources, especial stress being laid upon the myths of North American Indian origin.

Clifton, R. The miller and the toad. Bost., Sherman, French & Co., 1909, [1908.] c. 220 p. D. cl., $1.20 net.

A weird, visionary story of a young miller who sits in his mill feeling remorse about a well-loved girl sacrificed to his selfish love. He sees a great toad, his last waking sight. Then he dreams, meets the lost love and together they go through space and think long thoughts upon heaven and earth, intellect, superstition, ecclesiasticism, "new thought," etc. They meet spirits long dead and discuss all that has moved the world. A great crash of lightning awakes him, the vision of Beulah vanishes and the great toad still sits; but his inward eyes have been opened and the miller begins to live for higher purposes.

Conrad Cottrell Kemp, assistant of an actuarial society and sub-assistant acting manager of the Consolidated Assurance Corporation, Charing Cross, was forced to relinquish that office because he inherited £15,000 on condition that he should leave all trade and devote himself to the fine arts, notably to poetry, to which his tastes especially leaned. His story is full of adventure, conspiracy, daring and devotion, and the Princess of Hackney gives him some quite stormy moments.

Cook, Albert Stanburrough, ed. Concordance to the English poems of Thomas Gray. Bost., Houghton Mifflin Co., 1908. c. 10+160 p. O. cl., $2.50 net.

Editor is president of the Concordance Society organized at Yale University in the Christmas vacation of 1906. The choice of authors rests on: his historical importance; the public interest in him; and the moderate compass of his works, so that the compilation may be effected by few hands in a brief time and the subvention required by the publishers may not unduly tax the resources of the Society. The basis of Concordance is Gosse's edition of Gray, and Gosse's order of poems has been followed with few exceptions. The compilers have been new at the work, but have done it with enthusiasm and common-sense and great promptness.

When Henry VIII. had his breach with the Pope he suppressed the English monastic houses both to crush the strongest bulwark of papal power in England and to obtain lands and riches to grant to the nobility to secure their favor and support. When Edward VI. began to reign the seizure of plate and ornaments in the churches continued. In 1549 a commission was ordered to make inventories of the goods of all the churches and stop all private embezzlement. These inventories are of the highest legal, historical and liturgical importance. No other country can show the like. The Alcuin Club is printing these inventories. The two already out are those of Bedfordshire and Huntingdonshire.

Hale, G. Ellery, and Fox, Philip. The rotation period of the sun, as determined from the motions of the calcium flocculi. Wash., D. C., Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1908. 54 p. tabs., pls. Q. pap., 40 c.

Rotation period of the sun has been determined by three independent methods: 1, from measurements of the motions of the spots in longitude; 2, from measurements of the motions of the faculae in longitude; 3, from spectroscopic measurements of the motion of the line of sight of the approaching and receding limbs. Monochromatic photographs made with the spectroheliograph of the Kentwood Observatory in the years 1902-04 provided material for a new determination of the rotation period. A grant from the Carnegie Institution has made it possible to undertake the measurement of plates of the Yerkes Observatory. The results of this investigation are contained in the present pamphlet.

Essays and a poem, "A chant of darkness," which appeared originally in the Century Magazine. Blind, deaf and dumb, this phenomenal mind and idealistic poetic temperament seems to grasp all grasped by other minds that have all their senses as means of ingress for outside influences. She writes with the fluency and happy choice of words of Charles Lamb and Robert Louis Stevenson. There are fifteen essays, many devoted to the miraculous achievements that have come to her through touch. The book is a disquisition on the use of the five senses that is unique.

By an ingenious mechanical device the medal prepared by Jules Edouard Roiné for the Lincoln Centennial, February 12, 1909, is bound in this volume, and George N. Olcott, of Columbia University, has furnished a scholarly essay on the origin and symbolism of medals. Roiné ranks as one of the greatest medallists of the world. The copies of the medal have been struck under the instructions of Mr. Robert Hewitt, the well-known collector of medallic Americana, who is the owner of the copyright. On the 12th of February, 1909, the dies of the medal are to be cancelled, and then deposited in the collection of the American Numismatic Society. After that date no more copies of the medal or of the book containing the medal can be produced. The contents of the book also include: The Lincoln Centenary, 1809-1909, by R. Lloyd Jones; Farewell address at Springfield, Ill., February 11, 1861; Emancipation proclamation September 22, 1862; Letter to Horace Greeley on the policy of the administration, August 22, 1862, Letter to General J. A few months back a prominent banker delivered an address on investment bonds. He was requested to mention a book devoted wholly to that subject. A review of financial literature brought out the fact that no such book existed. It is to fill this void that this book has been written. The subject has been developed with reference to two principal ideas: the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation; and the general investment aspect of the instrument. The language has been kept as untechnical as was possible.

A tale of intrigue, danger and romance dealing with the French Revolution was published under the title of "The Scarlet Pimpernel." (See American catalogue, 1905-07, pt. 2, 1905.) The daring and mysterious young English hero of the former story is now the "Elusive Pimpernel." The story opens in 1793 when Robespierre had proclaimed the reign of the Goddess of Reason. Most of the characters of the first book appear. The terrible and fascinating French agent Chauvelin goes to England to take his revenge of the "Scarlet Pimpernel," but finds him indeed the "Elusive Pimpernel" still adored by his French wife Marguerite.

A romance of the carving of the "Venus de Milo." In the ancient Greek city of Melos, Philotios and Vasta, rival sculptors, each wrought a masterpiece for a prize offered by King Memmiades. Vasta, consumed by jealousy of his rival's art and jealousy of his successful love for Adonia, beloved by both, destroys the sculptured Madonna by knocking off the arms and the babe they hold. Just as Philotios is about to kill Vasta for this act he catches sight of his statue and exclaims: "More beautiful than before! The something for which I sought and could not find."

Pittman, Mrs. Hannah Daviess. The heart of Kentucky. Wash., D. C., Neale Publishing Co., 1908. c. 267 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The story is based upon a crime committed in Kentucky in 1825. The murderer is convicted upon circumstantial evidence and makes no plea for mercy. He suffers the penalty of the law, and only after his death is the real motive for the crime made public. The man had killed the Attorney General of the State because he had dishonored his wife. The facts are modified in the story, the husband and wife committing suicide in the prison. The heart of Kentucky has ever since been faithful to the "unwritten law."

Author is instructor in history at Mount Holyoke College. While taking a course of lectures on the history of the English poor law she became interested in the law of parochial settlement and its effect upon mobility of the workingman. She gives an account of such law of settlement and of its final repeal during the era of the abolition of the Corn laws. This monograph gives the results of a detailed investigation of the methods by which the parochial settlement laws were enforced. The manuscript sources of the Public Record Office, London, furnish the chief facts. Appendix: 1, Account of sources, Rhodes, Helen. Psychoma (soul-sleep); with introd. by Elizabeth Town. Holyoke, Mass., Elizabeth Towne, 1908. c. 155 p. por. D. cl., $1.

Based on the assumption that we are all asleep, that even when waking we are merely "dreaming out aloud," and it offers a system of spiritual gymnastics designed to awaken the slumbering soul to cosmic consciousness. This system goes back to the method of the Buddhistic adepts for its foundation. Conscious control of breathing is advocated as the first step in the process of waking the soul from its sleep. Through breathing, we are told, the brain may gain control of the solar plexus and thus transmute animal instincts into spiritual power.

The life of the last grandson of James II., known as Henry Stuart, Cardinal York, "Duke of York" or "Henry IX." He died on July 13, 1807; with him ended the Stuart dynasty. "The book," the author says, "was completed some time before the 'King over the water' (of which she was joint-author), but it was judged better to keep it back until the son's life should follow as a sequel to the father's. Both have come from the same long and careful research. Until 1766 the lives naturally overlap. Incidents common to both lives that are given at length in King James' life are noted here as briefly as possible, that the biography should be complete in itself; while much that was taken from the former book, to keep within the limits of the volume, finds place here." The author of "The apple of Eden" breaks new ground in "Mirage." His scene is an unfashionable boarding house in London. Here his hero has lived for two years after losing in Paris almost all his fortune. The Visconte du Gueslin is a fine specimen of an aristocratic old gentleman, still proud in his poverty. His old valet Courtot has followed him from Paris and taken a position as waiter in a second rate restaurant. His devotion to his old master is beautifully pictured. A small inheritance is the cause of both men going into an English country town, where each finds his little romance. They both forget their years and are lost in the mirage of their illusions.

Tollemache was born May 28, 1838. He suffered always from extremely defective eyesight. This cut him off from many outside interests, threw him upon himself and made him abnormally introspective. His father's stern Calvinism brought him unrest and vexation and much of his book deals with the religious questions so vital during his youth. Tollemache came in contact with all the literary men of his day and his desultory reminiscences are full of interesting facts about them.

Gives a terrible picture of the conditions of servant life in Berlin. Poor Mina, straight from the country, ignorant and lonely, goes through cruelty and hunger and desertion. Thrown out by her own people when they learn her disgrace, she finally marries her child's father and lives a life of slavery in the country under the tyranny of his brutal mother. The book ends hopefully, one of Mina's former employers having come to her rescue.

Young, Alexander Bell Filson. When the tide turns. Bost., Dana Estes & Co., 1908. c. 357 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Rupert Savage had been brought up by two unmarried aunts who lived in an old abbey on the northern coast of Ireland. From early youth he delighted to make pictures with just a few suggestive strokes. When 21 he goes to London and becomes "the rage" among the circle of writers, painters and musicians devoted to cutré suggestive or realistic methods. He finally illustrates a book of "Syrian songs" which the author has described to him. His work is pronounced remarkable, but he is condemned for associating it with erotic poetry. He is impressionable and women have great influence on his life. The end is "of the new order."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 5, 1908.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE TARIFF ON BOOKS AND BOOK MATERIALS.

THE freeing of wood pulp and paper from duty has received considerable attention at Washington, in the Ways and Means Committee hearings, because of the strong movement by the newspaper publishers in favor of the abolition of the duty. Incidentally some attention has been given to the duty on books. There have been counter propositions to increase the duty on books substantially, and to free books from duty altogether, the latter on educational grounds similar to the arguments in favor of free art. Not much emphasis has been put, however, on either proposition, and it is probable that the duty on books will remain in status quo, at 25% ad valorem.

The proposition to increase the duty emanates from the Typothetæ of the City of New York, in a Brief which we print in full elsewhere, and which will be a surprise to most publishers. In face of a movement to reduce the tariff, it advocates a 75% duty ad valorem on books, and proposes to remove from the free list and subject to this rate of duty books in foreign languages, books imported for libraries, and other classes now free. It is not probable that the present or ensuing Congress will substantially increase duties in any direction, and the proposal of the Typothetæ is scarcely likely to receive favor from the publishers.

On the other hand, the movement to place books generally on the free list is not likely to receive substantial support. The publishing trade is divided amongst itself on the question of the tariff, a large proportion of its personnel, especially in New York, being tariff reformers or even free traders, while several houses hold protectionist views. But no tariff reformer would favor the freeing of books from duty while the materials of book-making are subjected to duty, and, as at present, to higher duty than on books themselves. Indeed, American publishers for years have suffered from the fact that in their case the tariff is turned up-side-down and that the duties they must pay on materials are higher than the duties on their product. In view of the fact that publishing is for the most part distinctively national, the effect of the tariff, even under these disadvantageous circumstances, has been less than might have been supposed. It should be noted incidentally that the argument for free art does not apply to free books, for in the case of art works the material is practically negligible, as the canvas and paint of the painter, or the marble of the sculptor, while in book-making the material forms a substantial factor of cost.

WE reprint elsewhere from the New York Evening Post a triangular discussion which presents three phases of the pending questions on tariff and copyright. These communications tell their own story, and although the discussion on the tariff on books is likely for the present to be academic rather than resultful it should be followed carefully by the trade.

WE give in this issue an authoritative summary of the Berlin Copyright Conference and also the full text of the Berlin Convention, in modification of the Berne Convention, from the official French text made public in the Droit d'Auteur, the official organ of the International Copyright Office at Berne, in its issue of November 15, translated by the Copyright Office at Washington, and printed in circular 4a of that office. Those desiring copies of that circular may obtain them on application to the Copyright Office as it is not intended to send this circular to the ordinary list of names. It will be noted, as surmised in our recent comment, that the term adopted is that "of life and fifty years." The official text brings out the other important features of the Convention, but we shall defer comment on these until a later issue. It is gratifying that this Convention has been adopted in time for the Joint Committee on Patents to take its proposals into consideration before presenting the pending copyright measure in its final shape, and it is to be hoped that in all practicable directions the proposed bill may be brought into conformity with the Berlin agreement. Of course, this is not at present practicable in relation to the manufacturing clause and certain other features which have so far prevented, and will for some time prevent, the adherence of the United States to the world-league for the protection of intellectual property in which most civilized nations have joined.

THE INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT CONVENTION OF BERLIN.

REVISED TEXT, 1908, OF THE CONVENTION CREATING THE INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT UNION.

PRELIMINARY REMARKS.

The Berne Convention creating the International Copyright Union for the protection of works of literature and art was signed on September 9, 1886, and went into force on December 5, 1887. The Additional Agreement formulated at the first conference of revision, which met in Paris, was signed on May 4, 1896, and went into effect on December 9, 1897. This modified Articles 2, 3, 5, 7, 12, and 20 of the Convention, and Numbers 1 and 4 of the "Protocole de Clôture." A Declaration interpreting certain provisions of the Berne Convention of 1886 and the Additional Agreement of Paris of 1896 was also signed on May 4, 1896, to go into effect on September 9, 1897.

A second conference of revision was held in Berlin from October 14 to November 14, 1908, and a new text to take the place of the three documents cited above was formulated by the representatives of the following fifteen countries: Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Liberia, Luxembourg, Monaco, Norway, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, and Tunis.

Representatives from the following non-Union countries were also present at the conference: Argentina, Chile, China, Colombia, Ecuador, Greece, Guatemala, Mexico, The Netherlands (Holland), Nicaragua, Peru, Persia, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Siam, the United States, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

The representative from the United States was only present to "observe and report," with no power to take part in the discussions, and, beyond making a statement to that effect, took no part in the proceedings of the Conference.

The Convention was signed on November 13th and the Conference closed on November 14th. To give publicity to the proposed treaty, by resolution of the Conference the official text was published in the organ of the International Copyright Bureau at Berne, "Le Droit d'Auteur," for November 15th. This is the French text of the treaty printed below.

The English translation here printed is made from the text as published in Le Droit d'Auteur. Where doubt has been felt as to the best English equivalent, the words of the French text have been added, and the full official text in French follows the English text.

Article 22 of the Convention provides that it shall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged at Berlin, not later than the first of July, 1910.

THORVALD SOLBERG,
Register of Copyrights.

ARTICLE 1.

Union to protect literary and artistic works.—The contracting countries are constituted into a Union for the protection of the rights of authors in their literary and artistic works.

ARTICLE 2.

Definition of "literary and artistic works."—The expression "literary and artistic works" includes all productions in the literary, scientific or artistic domain, whatever the mode or form of reproduction, such as: books, pamphlets and other writings; dramatic or dramatico-musical works; choreographic works and pantomimes, the stage directions ("mise en scène") of which are fixed in writing or otherwise; musical compositions with or without words; drawings, paintings; works of architecture and sculpture; engravings and lithographs; illustrations; geographical charts; plans, sketches and plastic works relating to geography, topography, architecture, or the sciences.

Translations, arrangements, and adaptations protected.—Translations, adaptations, arrangements of music and other reproductions transformed from a literary or artistic work, as well as compilations from different works, are protected as original works without prejudice to the rights of the author of the original work.

The contracting countries are pledged to secure protection in the case of the works mentioned above.

Works of art applied to industry.—Works of art applied to industry are protected so far as the domestic legislation of each country allows.

ARTICLE 3.

Photographic works to be protected.—The present Convention applies to photographic works and to works obtained by any process analogous to photography. The contracting countries are pledged to guarantee protection to such works.

ARTICLE 4.

Authors to enjoy in countries of the Union the rights granted to natives.—Authors within the jurisdiction of one of the countries of the Union enjoy for their works whether unpublished or published for the first time in one of the countries of the Union such rights, in the countries other than the country of origin of the work, as the respective laws now accord or shall hereafter accord to natives, as well as the rights specially accorded by the present Convention.

No formalities required.—The enjoyment and the exercise of such rights are not subject to any formality; such enjoyment and such exercise are independent of the existence of protection in the country of origin of the work. Consequently, apart from the stipulations of the present Convention, the extent of the protection, as well as the means of redress guaranteed to the author to safeguard his rights, are regulated exclusively according to the legislation of the country where the protection is claimed.

Definition of country of origin.—The following is considered as the country of origin of the work: for unpublished works, the country to which the author belongs; for published works, the country of first publication, and for works published simultaneously in several countries of the Union, the country among them whose legislation grants the shortest term of protection. For works published simultaneously in a country outside of the Union and in a country within the Union, it is the latter country which is exclusively considered as the country of origin.

Published works.—By published works ("œuvres publiées") must be understood, according to the present Convention, works which have been issued ("œuvres éditées"). The representation of a dramatic or dramatico-musical work, the performance of a musical work, the exhibition of a work of art and the construction of a work of architecture do not constitute publication.

ARTICLE 5.

Authors of countries of the Union have some rights as natives of other countries.—Authors within the jurisdiction of one of the countries of the Union who publish their works for the first time in another country of the Union, have in this latter country the same rights as national authors.

ARTICLE 6.

Authors not belonging to countries of the Union also protected if they first publish in a Union country.—Authors not within the jurisdiction of any one of the countries of the Union, who publish for the first time their works in one of these countries, enjoy in that country the same rights as national authors, and in the other countries of the Union the rights accorded by the present Convention.

ARTICLE 7.

Term of protection: Life and 50 years.—The term of protection granted by the present Convention comprises the life of the author and fifty years after his death.

If not adopted; Laws of country to govern term.—In case this term, however, should not be adopted uniformly by all the countries of the Union, the duration of the protection shall be regulated by the law of the country where protection is claimed, and can not exceed the term granted in the country of origin of the work. The contracting countries will consequently only be required to apply the provision of the preceding paragraph to the extent to which it agrees with their domestic law.

Term for photographic, posthumous, anonymous or pseudonymous works.—For photographic works and works obtained by a process analogous to photography, for posthumous works, for anonymous or pseudonymous works, the term of protection is regulated by the law of the country where protection is claimed, but this term may not exceed the term fixed in the country of origin of the work.

ARTICLE 8.

Exclusive right of translation for entire term.—Authors of unpublished works within the jurisdiction of one of the countries of the Union, and authors of works published for the first time in one of these countries, enjoy in the other countries of the Union during the whole term of the right in the original work the exclusive right to make or to authorize the translation of their works.

ARTICLE 9.

Serial novels protected when published in newspapers or periodicals.—Serial stories ("romans-feuilletons") and novels and all other works, whether literary, scientific or artistic, whatever may be their subject, published in newspapers or periodicals of one of the countries of the Union, may not be reproduced in the other countries without the consent of the authors.

Reproduction of newspaper articles.—With the exception of serial stories ("romans-feuilletons") and of novels, any newspaper article may be reproduced by another newspaper if reproduction has not been expressly forbidden. The source, however, must be indicated. The confirmation of this obligation shall be determined by the legislation of the country where protection is claimed.

News items not protected.—The protection of the present Convention does not apply to news of the day or to miscellaneous news having the character merely of press information.

ARTICLE 10.

Extracts from literary or artistic works for educational publications.—As concerns the right of borrowing lawfully from literary or artistic works for use in publications intended for instruction or having a scientific character, or for chrestomathies, the provisions of the legislation of the countries of the Union and of the special treaties existing or to be concluded between them shall govern.

ARTICLE 11.

Representation of dramatic or dramatico-musical works.—The stipulations of the present Convention apply to the public representation of dramatic or dramatico-musical works and to the public performance of musical works, whether these works are published or not.

Representation of translations of dramatic works.—Authors of dramatic or dramatico-musical works are protected, during the term of their copyright in the original work, against the unauthorized public representation of a translation of their works.

Notice of reservation of performance not required.—In order to enjoy the protection of this article, authors, in publishing their works, are not obliged to prohibit the public representation or public performance of them.

ARTICLE 12.

Adaptations, etc., considered as infringements.—Among the unlawful reproductions to which the present Convention applies are specially included indirect, unauthorized appropriations of a literary or artistic work, such as adaptations, arrangements of music, transformations of a romance or novel or of a poem into a theatrical piece and vice-versâ, etc., when they are only the reproduction of such work in the same form or in another form with non-essential changes, additions or abridgments and without presenting the character of a new, original work.

ARTICLE 13.

Adaptation of musical works to mechanical instruments.—Authors of musical works have the exclusive right to authorize: (1) the adaptation of these works to instruments serving to reproduce them mechanically; (2) the public performance of the same works by means of these instruments.

Each country to regulate for itself the manner in which Convention shall apply.—The limitations and conditions relative to the application of this article shall be determined by the domestic legislation of each country in its own case; but all limitations and conditions of this nature shall have an effect strictly limited to the country which shall have adopted them.

Not retroactive.—The provisions of paragraph 1 have no retroactive effect, and therefore are not applicable in a country of the Union to works which, in that country shall have been lawfully adapted to mechanical instruments before the going into force of the present Convention.

Importation of mechanical musical appliances prohibited.—The adaptations made by virtue of paragraphs 2 and 3 of this article and imported without the authorization of the parties interested into a country where they are not lawful, may be seized there.

ARTICLE 14.

Reproduction by cinematograph.—Authors of literary, scientific or artistic works have the exclusive right to authorize the reproduction and the public representation of their works by means of the cinematograph.

Cinematographic productions protected.—Cinematographic productions are protected as literary or artistic works when by the arrangement of the stage effects or by the combination of incidents represented, the author shall have given to the work a personal and original character.

Cinematographs copyrightable.—Without prejudice to the rights of the author in the original work, the reproduction by the cinematograph of a literary, scientific or artistic work is protected as an original work.

Also any analogous production.—The preceding provisions apply to the reproduction or production obtained by any other process analogous to that of the cinematograph.

ARTICLE 15.

Author's name indicated on work sufficient proof of authorship.—In order that the authors of the works protected by the present Convention may be considered as such, until proof to the contrary, and admitted in consequence before the courts of the various countries of the Union to proceed against infringers, it is sufficient that the author's name be indicated upon the work in the usual manner.

Publisher of anonymous or pseudonymous works considered as representative of author.—For anonymous or pseudonymous works, the publisher whose name is indicated upon the work is entitled to protect the rights of the author. He is without other proofs considered the legal representative of the anonymous or pseudonymous author.

ARTICLE 16.

Seizure of pirated copies.—All infringing works may be seized by the competent authorities of the countries of the Union where the original work has a right to legal protection.

Seizure may also be made in these countries of reproductions which come from a country where the copyright in the work has terminated, or where the work has not been protected.

Seizure to be made according to the laws of each country.—The seizure takes place in conformity with the domestic legislation of each country.

ARTICLE 17.

Each government to exercise supervision as to circulation, representation or exhibition of works.—The provisions of the present Convention may not prejudice in any way the right which belongs to the Government of each of the countries of the Union to permit, to supervise, or to forbid, by means of legislation or of domestic police, the circulation, the representation or the exhibition of every work or production in regard to which competent authority may have to exercise this right.

ARTICLE 18.

Convention to apply to all works not in public domain at the time of its going into force.—The present Convention applies to all works which, at the time it goes into effect, have not fallen into the public domain of their country of origin because of the expiration of the term of protection.

But if a work by reason of the expiration of the term of protection which was previously secured for it has fallen into the public domain of the country where protection is claimed, such work will not be protected anew.

Special Conventions and domestic legislation may govern.—This principle will be applied in accordance with the stipulations to that effect contained in the special Conventions either existing or to be concluded between countries of the Union, and in default of such stipulations, its application will be regulated by each country in its own case.

Provisions of Convention to apply to new accessions.—The preceding provisions apply equally in the case of new accessions to the Union and where the term of protection would be extended by the application of Article 7.

ARTICLE 19.

More extensive rights may be granted by domestic legislation.—The provisions of the present Convention do not prevent a claim for the application of more favorable provisions which may be enacted by the legislation of a country of the Union in favor of foreigners in general.

ARTICLE 20.

More extensive right may be secured by special treaties.—The governments of the countries of the Union reserve the right to make between themselves special treaties, when these treaties would confer upon authors more extended rights than those accorded by the Union, or when they contain other stipulations not conflicting with the present Convention. The provisions of existing treaties which answer the aforesaid conditions remain in force.

ARTICLE 21.

Bureau of the International Union.—The international office instituted under the name of "Bureau of the International Union for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works" ("Bureau de l'Union internationale pour la protection des œuvres littéraires et artistiques") is maintained.

Under control of Switzerland.—This Bureau is placed under the high authority of the Government of the Swiss Confederation, which controls its organization and supervises its working.

Language of Bureau to be French.—The official language of the Bureau is the French language.

ARTICLE 22.

Duties of International Bureau.—The International Bureau brings together, arranges and publishes information of every kind relating to the protection of the rights of authors in their literary and artistic works. It studies questions of mutual utility interesting to the Union, and edits, with the aid of documents placed at its disposal by the various administrations, a periodical in the French language, treating questions concerning the purpose of the Union. The governments of the countries of the Union reserve the right to authorize the Bureau by common accord to publish an edition in one or more other languages, in case experience demonstrates the need.

Will furnish information as to copyright.—The International Bureau must hold itself at all times at the disposal of members of the Union to furnish them, in relation to questions concerning the protection of literary and artistic works, the special information of which they have need.

Director of the International Bureau.—The Director of the International Bureau makes an annual report on his administration, which is communicated to all the members of the Union.

ARTICLE 23.

Expenses of the International Bureau to be shared by contracting states.—The expenses of the Bureau of the International Union are shared in common by the contracting countries. Until a new decision, they may not exceed sixty thousand francs per year. This sum may be increased when needful by the simple decision of one of the Conferences provided for in Article 24.

Method of sharing expenses.—To determine the part of this sum total of expenses to be paid by each of the countries, the contracting countries and those which later adhere to the Union are divided into six classes each contributing in proportion to a certain number of units, to wit:

1st class.....	25 units
2d class.....	20 units
3d class.....	15 units
4th class.....	10 units
5th class.....	5 units
6th class.....	3 units

These coefficients are multiplied by the number of countries of each class, and the sum of the products thus obtained furnishes the number of units by which the total expense is to be divided. The quotient gives the amount of the unit of expense.

Each country shall declare, at the time of its accession, in which of the above-mentioned classes it desires to be placed.

Swiss Administration to prepare the budget of the International Bureau, etc.—The Swiss Administration prepares the budget of the Bureau and superintends its expenditures, makes necessary advances and draws up the annual account, which shall be communicated to all other administrations.

ARTICLE 24.

Revision of Convention.—The present Convention may be subjected to revision with a view to the introduction of amendments calculated to perfect the system of the Union.

To take place successively in the countries of the Union.—Questions of this nature, as well as those which from other points of view pertain to the development of the Union, are considered in the Conferences which will take place successively in the countries of the Union between the delegates of the said countries. The administration of the country where a Conference is to be held will, with the co-operation of the International Bureau, prepare the business of the same. The Director of the Bureau will attend the meetings of the Conferences and take part in the discussions without a deliberate voice.

Changes require unanimous consent.—No change in the present Convention is valid for the Union except on condition of the unanimous consent of the countries which compose it.

ARTICLE 25.

Accession of other countries.—The States outside of the Union which assure legal protection of the rights which are the object of the present Convention, may accede to it upon their request.

To be made known by Switzerland.—This accession shall be made known in writing to the Government of the Swiss Confederation and by the latter to all the others.

May substitute provisions of previous conventions.—Such accession shall imply full adhesion to all the clauses and admission to all the advantages stipulated in the present Convention. It may, however, indicate such provisions of the Convention of September 9, 1886, or of the Additional Act of May 4, 1896, as it may be judged necessary to substitute provisionally, at least, for the corresponding provisions of the present Convention.

ARTICLE 26.

Accession for colonies or foreign possessions.—The contracting countries have the right to accede at any time to the present Convention for their colonies or foreign possessions.

They may, for that purpose, either make a general declaration by which all their colonies or possessions are included in the accession, or name expressly those which are included therein, or confine themselves to indicating those which are excluded from it.

This declaration shall be made known in writing to the Government of the Swiss Confederation, and by the latter to all the others.

ARTICLE 27.

Present Convention to replace Berne Convention and Additional Articles. But Berne Convention remains in force between countries not signatory to present Convention.—The present Convention shall replace, in the relations between the contracting States, the Convention of Berne of September 9, 1886, including the Additional Article and the Final Protocol of the same day, as well as the Additional Act and the Interpretative Declaration of May 4, 1896. The convention acts above-mentioned shall remain in force in the relations with the States which do not ratify the present Convention.

Signatory States may declare themselves bound by former Conventions upon certain points.—The States signatory to the present Convention may, at the time of the exchange of ratifications declare that they intend, upon such or such point, to still remain bound by the provisions of the Conventions to which they have previously subscribed.

ARTICLE 28.

Convention to be ratified not later than July 1, 1910.—The present Convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Berlin, not later than the first of July, 1910.

Instrument to be filed with Swiss Government.—Each contracting party shall send, for the exchange of ratifications, a single instrument, which shall be deposited, with those of the other countries, in the archives of the Government of the Swiss Confederation. Each party shall receive in return a copy of the procès-verbal of the exchange of ratifications, signed by the Plenipotentiaries who shall have taken part therein.

ARTICLE 29.

Convention to take effect three months after exchange of ratifications.—The present Convention shall be put into execution three months after the exchange of the ratifications and shall remain in force for an indefinite time, until the expiration of one year from the day when denunciation of it shall have been made.

Withdrawal from the Convention.—This denunciation shall be addressed to the Government of the Swiss Confederation. It shall only be effective as regards the country which shall have made it, the Convention remaining in force for the other countries of the Union.

ARTICLE 30.

Adoption of term of life and 50 years to be notified.—The States which introduce into their legislation the term of protection of fifty years* provided for by Article 7, paragraph 1, of the present Convention, shall make it known to the Government of the Swiss Confederation by a written notification which shall be communicated at once by that Government to all the other countries of the Union.

Notice shall be given of renouncement of any reservations.—It shall be the same for such States as shall renounce any reservations made by them in virtue of Articles 25, 26, and 27.

Signatures.—In testimony of which, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention and have attached thereto their seals.

Date of signing, November 13, 1908.—Done at Berlin, the thirteenth of November, one thousand nine hundred eight, in a single copy, which shall be deposited in the archives of the Government of the Swiss Confederation, and of which copies, properly certified, shall be sent through diplomatic channels to the contracting countries.

SUMMARY OF PROCEEDINGS.

THE following summary of the proceedings of the Conference of Berlin is given in the London Times of November 14, from its special correspondent at Berlin, under date of November 13:

The general effect of the alterations made in the Copyright Convention of Berne by the new Convention of Berlin is in the direction of simplifying the protection afforded by copyright in the States of the Union and doing away with formalities involving proof of the law of each State in the event of cases coming before the law courts. A further principle has been established in the protection throughout the Union of musical copyright. A compromise was unanimously arrived at on the vexed question of musical copyright and the singing and talking machines which have to a large extent come into existence, commercially speaking, since the Paris Conference of 1896. While the right of the holder of musical copyright is asserted, a British proposal for the protection of vested interests was accepted, subject to the addition of the proposal by France, that if works had been lawfully adapted to gramophones prior to the Convention, they should be considered as having fallen into the public domain and being open to all machines.

*Article 7 provides for a general term of protection for life and fifty years.

It was found quite impracticable to endorse the claim of the gramophone and other companies that a compulsory royalty should be established throughout the States of the Union. Each State is permitted to make its own laws on this subject, either establishing the proposed compulsory royalty or maintaining existing interests.

Copyright is also recognized in choreographic works and pantomimes, and actors' rights are protected by a provision that cinematographs must not reproduce performances without permission from the owner of the copyright.

Upon the question of the reservation of the rights of authors in published musical pieces, at present provided for in England by the Act of 1882, it was unanimously agreed—Great Britain finally concurring—that this reservation should be abolished as derogating from the rights of authors and imposing difficult and formal restrictions upon the proof of copyright. The British delegates reserved for their country the right to legislate in such a manner as to avoid undue hardship to first offenders or persons involuntarily infringing the law. It may be well to add that this abolition is supported by the British Musical Publishers' Association, it being recognized that the deterrent effect of the Acts of 1882 and 1888 is secured by the grant of discretion to the magistrates to inflict a nominal fine in cases of infringement, and not by the notices upon the pieces of music themselves. As is already the case in England, protection is granted throughout the Union, and regulations are made with regard to cinematographs and to the use of gramophones, not only of musical, but of literary works, as well as lectures and monologues.

At present an author retains the exclusive right of translation only on condition that he publishes a translation of his work within a period of ten years. This provision, which is very detrimental to works of a serious character and to the quality of translations, has been abolished.

The question of newspaper copyright was discussed at great length, and eventually an amendment was adopted which divides the matter printed in newspapers into three specific classes. Those of the first class, serial stories, tales, and all other works, literary, scientific, and artistic, whatever their object may be, published in newspapers and periodicals, are given absolute protection. The second class, which comprises all newspaper matter, (excepting the foregoing category and mere items of general news or faits divers,) may be reproduced by other newspapers on condition that their source is indicated, if their reproduction be not expressly forbidden. To the third class of newspaper matter—namely, news of the day and simple facts, faits divers—no protection is given.

While the Berne Convention permitted the complete reproduction of political articles, the present revised Convention would clearly protect such articles as, for instance, one by Lord Morley of Blackburn on "The Policy of Mr. Gladstone," or "The Life of Lord Beaconsfield," in which political views were discussed in a literary form. It would, therefore, appear sufficient for a newspaper which may desire to prevent the reproduction of such articles to insert a general notice prohibiting the reproduction of a special category of articles or a special notice concerning a particular article or series of articles, always providing that these notices are sufficiently clear to act as a warning against the infringement of copyright. The exact extent of the protection and the penalties to be imposed for infringements of the law remain to be settled either by the judgment of the Law Courts, or by the legislation of each country. It is understood that France, Germany, and Italy considered it important that the name of the writer, when given, should also appear in the newspaper reproducing an article. This proposal was opposed by the British delegates, as signed articles are the exception in the United Kingdom, and the provision might prove inconvenient in the case of quotations from the Continental press, and was eventually abandoned. It is clearly understood, however, that the effect of this prohibition of the complete reproduction of political articles is not intended to prevent newspapers from making fair quotations from such articles or from publishing such résumés of the opinions of the press of a whole country as frequently appear, for instance, in The Times.

The tendency of the Berlin Convention towards simplifying the protection of copyright is illustrated by the provision that when copyright is in question all the States of the Union are treated as a single State, and that copyright is to be presumed without proof of the formality that it has been obtained according to the law of the country where the owner has taken out his copyright, in the case of published works, or resides, in the case of non-published works. With the object of still further simplification, so that the dates of all existing copyrights could be easily and clearly ascertained, France proposed that throughout the States of the Union there should be one general term—namely, the life of the author and 50 years after his death. This proposal not having been inserted in the document préliminaire, and the British Government having thus had no time to consult those interested in the matter, the British delegates only gave their adhesion to the Convention as a whole on condition that until each State chose to alter its legislation in the sense proposed the term of copyright should continue in each country to be that provided for by its existing laws.

The present British copyright for books is the life of the author and seven years after his death, or 42 years from the publication of the work, whichever is the longest. This term is fixed by the Act of 1842, which applies to Great Britain and all her colonies. The period of the author's life and 50 years or more in addition has been adopted in Spain (author's life and 80 years after), France, Belgium, Luxemburg, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Tunis and Monaco. Different terms exist in Italy and Haiti, while Germany, Japan and Switzerland grant the author's life and 30 years after his death. Italy is prepared to give the period of life and 50 years additional, while Germany would probably do likewise if Great Britain were to agree to extend her term. The author's life and 50 years was suggested as an ideal by the Copyright Commission of 1878 if international unanimity could be secured—a suggestion made at a time when not even the Berne Convention had shown that such unanimity was possible.

At the third plenary sitting of the Copyright Conference held November 13, at which Rome was chosen as the place of meeting of the next conference, all the articles of the revised Convention were adopted, and at a second meeting held in the evening at half-past 6 it was signed by all the delegates with one exception, that of Sir Henry Bergne, the principal British delegate, who was unable to attend the sittings during the last ten days owing to a serious attack of pneumonia. The illness of Sir Henry Bergne has aroused great sympathy among the delegates, who hoped that he might be able to add his signature, as he and M. Renault are the only members of the conference who signed the Berne Convention of 1886 and took part in the negotiations in Paris in 1896. The delegates were unanimous in their praise of the masterly manner in which the business part of the proceedings was conducted by M. Renault—a task which fell to him owing to his exceptional acquaintance with the subjects discussed, although the Prussian Minister, Dr. von Studt, held the position of president as the chief German delegate.

M. Renault's report, partially drafted during the time he was engaged in discussing the legal aspects of the Casablanca affair, is regarded as an exceptionally able statement of the stage now reached in the unification of copyright law. Union has this time, to paraphrase the words of M. Renault, been secured by renouncing absolute unanimity. This time there are no additional acts and all the delegates have signed the same revised Convention. But this outward sign of union—and, it is hoped, omen of a unanimity to be realized in time—is combined with an elasticity of form that leaves three doors open to all States adhering to the union, and up to the ratification by their respective Parliaments before July, 1910, enables each of them to "contract out" of any provisions which they may for the time be unwilling to accept. It is, furthermore, possible for adhering States to limit their adhesion to one or both of the preceding Conventions or to special provisions of them, omitting others. It is hoped that this exceptional elasticity will do much to promote the adhesion of outstanding States, such as Russia and Holland, and to bring some existing members of the union more completely into line with the majority.

It would be a mistake to suppose that the conference consisted chiefly of authors, publishers, and their advocates. The newspaper interest was also defended, and to a still greater degree that of the general public was represented, as may be seen from a list of the delegates. These are chiefly diplomatists and other State officials. In addition to M. Cambon, the Ambassador, M. Renault, M. Le-comte and M. Breton, the French delegation was distinguished by the presence of two academicians, M. Ernest Lavisse, the historian, and M. Paul Hervieu, who, as president of the Société des Auteurs et Compositeurs Dramatiques, took a most active part in the work in the course of which he made some brilliant speeches and delighted his colleagues with his wit and eloquence. The most active representatives of other States were, for Germany, Dr. Dungs, Dr. Göbel, Professor Osterrieth and Herr Robolsky; for Belgium, MM. Borchgrave and Warwermans, and for Italy, the Ambassador, Senator Pansa, and M. Ferrari.

It may be fairly said that all the delegates, including the British, are unanimous in regarding the result of their labors as highly promising, although, of course, until ratification by the States concerned, that is to say, at latest July, 1910, it will be impossible to say exactly to what extent the decisions come to will be actually carried into effect. The German delegation in particular is much gratified at the reception of its programme, which may be said to have been almost completely adopted. The French delegates rejoice at the progress made by their views, particularly on the extension of the term of copyright and the protection of translations. There is a strong impression among the German delegates that their Government would not oppose the extension of copyright to life and 50 years, and that if England were to agree to it the Reichstag would not raise objections. In that case setting aside Japan, which is remote, and Switzerland, which is a small State not producing much literature, Germany would find herself alone in Europe if England were to adhere to the new term, for Italy is introducing a bill adopting it. A prominent German delegate has called my attention to the fact that some seventy years ago copyright for the author's life and 50 years after death was advocated in England by Talfourd, Gladstone, Carlyle and a number of well-known British authors.

THE TYPOTHETÆ'S PROPOSAL FOR AMENDING THE TARIFF.

ON November 21, Isaac H. Blanchard, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Typothetæ of the City of New York, and Charles W. Smith, Recording Secretary of that organization, appeared before the "Ways and Means" Committee at Washington in the preliminary hearing on Tariff Revision. These representatives from the New York Typothetæ were met at Washington by E. Lawrence Fell, of Philadelphia, President of the United Typothetæ of America. Isaac H. Blanchard was spokesman for the Typothetæ.

The first print of tariff hearings for Saturday, November 21, as issued by the Ways and Means Committee, gives the following record of the hearings:

"Mr. Blanchard. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I represent the Typothetæ of the City of New York—the job printing and publishing industry of the United States. Our organization is a part of the United Typothetæ of America, the national organization of the graphic arts trade, and, as the strongest branch of that national organization, we feel that we represent to-day the sentiment of the job printers and publishers of this country. Many members of our organization are represented in the Brief presented for your consideration by the National Association of Employing Lithographers, and our membership begs to indorse in detail the representations placed before you by that organization.

"In the Brief, Mr. Chairman, which we submit, and which I will not read except to follow your suggestion to make it brief, we have quoted your tariff schedule of 25 per cent. in clause 403, and we refer to the free list in clauses 500, 501, 502, and 503. We have submitted our substitute propositions which provide for an increase in duty. We submit the volume of the industry on page 4 and volume of the imports on page 4, 5, and 6. We submit for your consideration a comparison of the weekly wages, on page 6, and some illustrations on pages 7 and 8, to which I want to call your attention.

"The inventory value of printed matter consists of the two factors, merchandise or paper stock and labor, and in some cases the labor value is 25 per cent. of the total inventory value, and in some cases it runs as high as 75 per cent. In a case where the labor value of the inventory is 75 per cent. on a $1000 inventory, under the present 25 per cent. duty the laid-down value is $1275 of the imported $1000 inventory. If produced in the United States as compared with the German production, the cost of that inventory is $2500. A further illustration is given on pages 7 and 8, which shows other comparisons, which I submit for your consideration.

"The organization which I represent asks one thing only—an even chance in our home market. From the tables that are submitted it is apparent that with a tariff of 75 per cent. the merchandise stock values of the average inventory would have to be in excess of one-half of the total inventory before the American manufacturer will be able to deliver the goods at a price equal to the prices quoted by the foreign manufacturer."

Edgar D. Crumpacker, member of the Ways and Means Committee. "The paper manufacturing industry in this country is quite extensive, is it not? I mean the manufactures of paper?"

Blanchard. "Yes, sir."

Crumpacker. "Do you want an increase in the duty?"

Blanchard. "No, sir."

Crumpacker. "What are you asking for?"

Blanchard. "We are asking for an increase in the duty on printed matter, under section 403, reading 'Books of all kinds, including blank books and pamphlets and engravings bound or unbound,' etc."

Crumpacker. "And printed matter?"

Blanchard. "Yes."

Crumpacker. "What is the ad valorem duty now?"

Blanchard. "Twenty-five per cent. on some items; free list on some others."

Crumpacker. "It is a large industry in the United States now?"

Blanchard. "It is an industry which in 1905, according to the census reports, amounted to $186,000,000."

Crumpacker. "It is a prosperous industry?"

Blanchard. "The prosperity is measured by the total and bulk of business;"

Crumpacker. "You mentioned wages in this country and in Germany. That was mentioned by several of the gentlemen who have given testimony on the subject. It would seem that the rate of wages in this country is about four times as high as the rate in Germany for the same kind of service?"

Blanchard. "Yes, sir."

Crumpacker. "Do you know why German artisans, skilled and unskilled, do not come over here if they can receive four times as good wages as they are getting at home? I understand we do not have any considerable amount of immigrants from Germany, do we?"

Blanchard. "I believe we do."

Crumpacker. "Any considerable number of immigrants from Germany?"

Blanchard. "I believe so. I have no statistics."

Crumpacker. "I had supposed they were satisfied with the conditions at home and had quit coming here largely?"

Blanchard. "I could not furnish any statement as to that by authority."

Crumpacker. "That is a statement I cannot altogether reconcile with the situation."

Blanchard. "Do I understand you query the correctness of the statement as to comparative wages?"

Crumpacker. "I wondered if it could be reconciled with the conditions. The immigration now coming into this country is, as I understand, from other countries than Germany."

Blanchard. "I would like to submit to the Committee some facts bearing on that inquiry. The facts would be as to the importation of contract labor, the workman from abroad being regarded as a contract laborer if he comes here with a position already arranged."

Joseph W. Fordney, member of the Ways and Means Committee. "What is the difference, do you say, between the cost of labor here and in Germany?"

Blanchard. "Four dollars here and $1 there, approximately. These schedules are on page 6 of the Brief."

Screno E. Payne, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. "He stated exactly in the Brief what it is."

Fordney. "Yes, but it will be some time before I get that Brief."

Joseph H. Gaines, member of the Ways and Means Committee. "That statement as to the comparative rate of wages seems to be a matter of some doubt. Do you file with the committee evidences of the differences that you claim?"

Blanchard. "Yes, sir. I will give you the entire details. Some of them have come from the chief clerk of the Census Bureau, Mr. Rossiter, and I will file with the Committee the authorities from which they are compiled."

Fordney. "The Republican campaign textbook showed that the difference between the wages here and in Germany was very great, sir, and I had that in mind.

Crumpacker. "I had the idea that the difference was great, but I did not know it was so great as that. The Germans, I should think, would come over under the present conditions."

Blanchard. "The German post cards come over, and why? Because Blanchard cannot get people here to make them and pay the bills for labor."

Payne. "The Committee have been obtaining during the recess, through the State Department, reports on the cost of labor abroad, and I have had one of the clerks prepare a statement of the cost of labor of hand compositors, and so forth, the class of labor mentioned in his brief, and while the wages vary from his brief, they show a higher cost paid in Great Britain, while they are meager in Germany."

Mr. Payne submitted the following: The following rates are paid by the city of Sheffield, England, in cases where no contract for printing is made, as given in printed circular accompanying report of consul at that place: Hand compositors, $8.40 per week; machine compositors (linotype), $10.08 per week; machine minders, $8.40 per week; lithograph printers, $8.30 per week. News printers—compositors (night work) $10.80; compositors (day work), $10.08; machine minders (day work), $8.40; jobbing compositors, $8.40. Coburg, Germany, pays $7.14 per week for male compositors; Stuttgart, Germany, $8.80; Nice, France, $10.45; Berne, Switzerland, $8.20.

Mr. Blanchard filed the following Brief:

BRIEF OF THE TYPOTHETAE OF NEW YORK CITY.

NOVEMBER 20th, 1908.

Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen of the Committee.

The Typothetæ of the City of New York is an organization composed of the leading houses of the graphic arts trades in that greatest American city. Our organization is a part of the United Typothetæ of America (the National organization of the Graphic Arts trade), and is the strongest branch of that National organization of employing printers. We feel, therefore, that we represent to-day the sentiment of the American job printers and publishers of this country.

The printing industry in New York City is its second greatest industry, and occupies a high relative position in all of the other leading cities of the United States: Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis and San Francisco, following in the order named.

We would respectfully request from your committee the further privilege of laying before you at a later hearing such additional specific information from our National organization and other local organizations as will be of further use to your committee in reaching wise and helpful conclusions as to legislation.

Many members of our organization are represented in the brief presented to your honorable committee by the National Association of Employing Lithographers. Our membership beg to endorse in detail the representations placed before you by that organization.

Our membership also includes the largest manufacturers of post cards in the United States.

Respectfully submitted,

ROBERT SCHALKENBACH,
President, Typothetæ.

ISAAC H. BLANCHARD,
Chairman of the Exec. Com., Typothetæ.

TARIFF SCHEDULES IN FORCE AT THE PRESENT TIME AFFECTING THE PRINTING INDUSTRY.

Tariff on Manufactures of Paper.

403. Books of all kinds, including blank books and pamphlets, and engravings bound or unbound, photographs, etchings, maps, charts, music in books or sheets, and printed matter, all the foregoing not specifically provided for in this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

Free List.

500. Books, engravings, photographs, etchings bound or unbound, maps and charts imported by authority or for the use of the United States or for the use of the Library of Congress.

501. Books, maps, music, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, and charts, which shall have been printed more than twenty years at the date of importation, and all hydrographic charts, and publications issued for their subscribers or exchanges by scientific and literary associations or academies, or publications of individuals for gratuitous private circulation, and public documents issued by foreign Governments.

502. Books and pamphlets printed exclusively in languages other than English; also books and music, in raised print, used exclusively by the blind.

503. Books, maps, music, photographs, etchings, lithographic prints and charts, specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use or by order of any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by the order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

PROPOSED TARIFF ON MANUFACTURES OF PAPER.

Substitute for Section 403.

Books of all kinds, including blank books and pamphlets, and engravings, bound or unbound, photographs, etchings, maps, charts, music in books or sheets, and printed matter, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this Act, seventy-five per centum ad valorem.

Substitute for Section 500.

Books, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, maps and charts imported for the use of the Library of Congress.

Substitute for Section 501.

All hydrographic charts and publications issued for their subscribers or exchanges by scientific and literary associations or academies, and public documents issued by foreign governments.

Substitute for Section 502.

Books and music in raised print used exclusively by the blind.

Cancel Section 503.

NOTE.—These figures for Germany are averages from 33 cities in 1905, plus a 10 per cent. increase to provide for the wage increases granted during the year 1907, the records being compiled from United States census reports. These figures for Great Britain are approximated from reports in the files of the American Tariff League of New York. These figures for the United States are the scale of wages paid in New York City, and are representative of the wage scales throughout the entire United States.

In the illustrations which we herewith submit as concrete methods of showing present conditions and conditions which are desired, a few points should be borne in mind.

First—In all printing inventories the labor item fluctuates from 30% to 80% of the entire inventory value, depending on the number of copies in an edition.

Second—As shown in the tables, wages in Germany are from 20% to 30% of the American wages, while wages in Great Britain are from 50% to 70% of American wages. In our illustration we base our estimates on wages at 33⅓% of American wages.

Third—In our estimate we have based the values of merchandise used at the same figures in the United States as abroad, although in reality these values throughout Europe are considerably less than in the United States.

Fourth—In making allowance for cost of transportation, insurance, and interest on the capital invested during transit, we have allowed but 2½% on the inventory value, which experience demonstrates to be a low estimate.

Illustration Number 1.

On an inventory of $1,000, where the labor value is 75% of the total, the laid down value of this inventory is:

Original inventory.....	$1,000.00
25 per cent. duty.....	250.00
Interest and transportation charges.....	25.00

Total present laid down value.....$1,275.00

If produced in the United States at wages three times as great as covered by the inventory on an inventory consisting of 75% labor and 25% merchandise stock, the laid down value of the $1,000 inventory is:

Merchandise stock.....	$ 250.00
Labor.....	2,250.00

Total present laid down value American manufacture.....$2,500.00

If a tariff of 75% as proposed prevailed, the conditions would be as follows:

Original inventory.....	$1,000.00
75 per cent duty.....	750.00
Interest and transportation charges.....	25.00

Total proposed laid down value of $1,000 inventory.....$1,775.00

Illustration No. 2.

On an inventory of $1,000, where the labor value is 50% of the total, the laid down value of $1,000 inventory is $1,275.

If produced in the United States, at wages three times as great as covered by the inventory value, consisting of 50% labor and 50% merchandise stock, the laid down value of the $1,000 inventory is:

Merchandise stock.....	$ 500.00
Labor.....	1,500.00

Total present laid down value American manufacture.....$2,000.00

If a tariff of 75% prevailed, the total laid down value of the $1,000 inventory would be $1,775.

Illustration No. 3.

On an inventory of $1,000, where the labor value is 25% of the total, the laid down value of $1,000 inventory is $1,275.

If produced in the United States at wages three times as great as covered by the inventory, the value on an inventory consisting of 25% labor and 75% merchandise stock, the laid down value of the $1,000 inventory is:

Merchandise stock.....	$750.00
Labor.....	750.00

Total present laid down value American manufacture.....$1,500.00

If a tariff of 75% prevailed, the total present laid down value on this inventory would be $1,775.

Conclusion.

From the above tables it is apparent that with a tariff of 75% the merchandise stock values of the average inventory would have to be in excess of one-half of the total inventory before the American manufacturer would be able to deliver the goods at a price equal to the price quoted by the foreign manufacturer.

TARIFF ON BOOKS.

THE following communications that appeared in the New York Evening Post last week present a triangular view of present questions of tariff and copyright which will be of interest to our readers:

"The barbarous duty on books is now, it is true, levied on English books only, strange enough, just the books of most importance to us. Almost alone of all civilized nations, the United States still taxes knowledge. Yet all the reference to the subject I have seen was a casual remark by Mr. W. P. Cutter, of the Forbes Library, Northampton, Mass., when the paper and pulp schedules were under discussion, to the effect that abolishing the duty on books altogether would be a much desired proceeding. Mr. Cutter, however, and some of his confrères, in their laudable desire to benefit the libraries under their charge by buying books below the market price, is on record as favoring one of those dangerous combinations in restraint of trade for pooling the $2,000,000 purchases of books by American libraries, and cutting down the profits of publishers and book dealers, however small the latter. These gentlemen forget that publishers, even after raising prices and shortening discounts, let alone the dealers who relieve librarians of the expense and drudgery of buying many small items from a great number of publishers, carry on their business at ever-increasing cost. This Mr. Cutter would speedily find out, when he attempts to establish his pooling business. But his desire to increase the libraries' purchasing power has also induced him and others to cut into the legitimate profits of American bookbinders by sending books, even American books, to binders in the pauper-labor countries of Europe for binding, and reimporting them duty-free. They have thus offended a 'union' more powerful and influential than all the aristocratic tribe of publishers and the dii minorum gentium of dealers combined. This fact was brought to Mr. Cutter's attention at the Washington hearing, coupled with the threat that the present, not altogether logical, privilege now enjoyed by public and educational libraries of importing duty-free English books, otherwise taxed 25 per cent. ad valorem, might be taken away in the coming revision of the tariff.

"Mr. Cutter, possibly, has done more harm than good as a spokesman for abolishing the odious tax on knowledge. As it is, the libraries' privilege of free importation is so cumbersome a proceeding as to make the most enthusiastic advocate of free books pray for its withdrawal. A solemn oath by the librarian, backed by the importer's personal oath, must be filed with the minute list of of each custom-house entry, and the librarian's signed receipt for each volume must, in due course, swell the collector's records, stating that such books are the permanent property of the library, etc. No library could, according to the wording of these documents, ever part with any of these books, and must keep them on its shelves forever. Moreover, every single part of a serial publication, if entered with reference to the original sworn order for the first part, must through decades give the date of the first entry, names of the steamship, the custom-house number of the entry, and, of course, also back it all up by the librarian's receipt. These parts often represent the fraction of a shilling only. That proceedings so unworthy of a great commonwealth are tolerated seems incredible, and the abolishment of either the duty on all books or of the privilege of free importation by libraries, should be made the subject of earnest representation with the Ways and Means Committee.

FREE BOOKS."

WILLIAM P. CUTTER'S REPLY.

"I note in your issue of the 28th inst. an anonymous communication criticising my action in endeavoring to present the case of the public libraries of the country before the Committee on Ways and Means, arguing for the continuance of the privilege of free importation which Congress has extended to educational institutions for nearly a century.

"I personally agree with your anonymous correspondent in advocating, if not the total remission of the duty on books, at least a substantial decrease, making the duty enough to protect our American workingmen, but not enough to serve as a basis for the illegal combination of publishers and booksellers which was in existence from 1901 to 1907, and which is now practically in operation. The present duty is about 100 per cent. of the cost of manufacture; the New York Typothete, which, I believe, is an organization of employing printers, having in its membership those firms who publish, and own their own printing plant, asked the committee to increase the duty on all books, whether published in a foreign language or not, from 25 per cent. to 75 per cent., or to three times the cost of printing the book! It is well to point out that it is frequently the custom of American 'publishers' to import English sheets, at a merely nominal valuation, the mere cost of printing and presswork, and sell them, with a new title-page and bound here in cases, at a price higher than the English published price; the duty on the sheets, even at 75 per cent., is merely nominal, whereas when the book is imported by an individual or a library the duty, being figured on the net retail price, would be prohibitory.

"I heard no threat that the privilege of duty-free importation would be taken away; I heard a request from the employing printers and the bookbinders that it be done. That is for the committee to recommend, if they feel so disposed. It is for both houses of Congress and the President to decide. I have little fear of the result.

"We have no quarrel with the bookbinders. I am perfectly willing to turn over all my work to an American binding firm that will convince me that they can duplicate the binding I now get, even if it is necessary to pay a higher price. I have yet to see it duplicated, although I have seen some imitations.

"The whole gist of the matter is this: Are the public libraries and private bookbuyers of this country, by tariff legislation, to be taxed directly to support a few firms who are not authors, not printers, not binders, but merely middlemen? Are we to pay for our books more than the 200 per cent. of cost of publishing that we now pay, and is Congress going to back up a combination in restraint of trade by giving them through tariff legislation what they have vainly sought by suits in the courts and through ingeniously worded phrases in a copyright bill? If Congress does so, it will not be done unwittingly, as long as a hearing is given to the representatives of the consumer.

"In criticising the machinery of importation, your correspondent voices the sentiment of all librarians. The regulations were made by the customs officials, not the libraries, and were made at the request and on the representation of the book trade.

WILLIAM P. CUTTER."

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM'S VIEWS.

"In a letter recently printed in the Evening Post, your correspondent ['Free Books'] calls attention to the 'barbarous duty on books.' He points out that the United States is alone among nations in imposing a tax on literature. It is true that France, Germany, and Italy, for instance, have protective systems, which, while not quite so absurd or so burdensome as that of the United States, do cover with their schedules a long series of articles required for general consumption. Neither in these countries nor in any other of the States of Europe, however, have the tariff makers ventured to include in their schedules of dutiable articles either books or works of art. On the Continent, as in England, it is apparently understood that anything that tends to hamper education must not only lessen the intellectual development of the people, but must also interfere with the development of its material resources.

"Your correspondent fails, however, to point out that as far as the United States is concerned, the educational and literary interests of the people are interfered with much more seriously by the customs' charges on the material required for the manufacture of books than by the amounts collected on the books that are imported. The latter, while, of course, an important factor, constitute but a small proportion of the literature called for each year by the reading community. The cost of producing books in this market is seriously and very unnecessarily increased by the duties on paper, binders' cloth, binders' thread, type metal, electrotpe and stereotype plates, and illustrations in nearly every form of reproduction, and even in the original designs.

"With experience, not only as a publisher, but as a printer and book manufacturer, I may say that the publishers and printers of this country have no need for any duty on books. I believe that the great majority would be quite ready to give their approval to its abolition. They contend, however, that in accordance with the accepted principles of any intelligently made tariff, the duties on the materials going into books should be abolished first, or at least at the same time. In this way the unnecessary burdens brought upon students and the reading public generally, for all classes of books, whether originating abroad or on this side, and whether the editions be printed in England or here, would be removed, and our nation would be saved from the stupidity of hampering by silly legislation the educational and literary interests of the people.

"Your correspondent calls attention to the arguments presented by Mr. Cutter, speaking as a representative of a certain group of the librarians, in behalf of the abolition of the duty on books. If the argument of the librarian can be widened so as to include a demand for the abolition of the unnecessary charges on the materials required for the making of the books, the publishers would, as stated, be prepared to support the contention. A change of this kind would secure a very much larger reduction in the cost of the books that are each year purchased by the libraries than would be brought about by the abolition only of the duty on imported books.

"In their desire, certainly well justified in its purpose, to secure for the funds at their command the largest purchasing power, the librarians add to their application for the abolition of the duty on books, a claim to be placed outside of the restrictions of the copyright law. They want, namely, to maintain the privilege of importing copyrighted books, irrespective of the permission of the owners of the copyright. They contend that the possible advantage to the reading public constitutes a sufficient warrant for such interference with the property of the authors and their assigns.

"This privilege of importing, irrespective of the permission of the owners of copyright, was secured in 1891 under an ill-considered interpolation made at the last moment in the statute; the provision has no parallel in the copyright law of any other country. It is difficult to understand how these librarians can have convinced themselves that the literary development of the country can be furthered by the undermining of the property rights of the producers of literature. The statute of 1787 secured for authors the 'exclusive right to their writings,' and all the succeeding statutes have undertaken, in like manner, with the same words or in more comprehensive terms, to secure for the authors and their assigns an exclusive control of the literary production. The legislators in the United States, following the example of those in Europe, had realized that an all-important factor in the production and distribution of literature was the inducement for the investment of capital in the business of publishing. It would be as reasonable to expect to further the settlement of a new territory or the construction of towns without an effective protection for the titles of real estate as to secure the use of capital for the production and distribution of books unless the producers and their assigns could be assured of exclusive control under a clear title of the books so produced.

"All property rights involve a measure of inconvenience for those who want to enjoy without restrictions property produced by others. It is the theory of copyright law that, in the case of literature, such inconvenience is more than offset by the advantage to the community in furthering the production of books. The necessary result of an inadequate and inconsistent copyright system is to decrease the possibility of producing authorized American editions of books originating in Europe. Such editions can be brought into the market to advantage only when publishers can secure in this country (as is secured in all other civilized States) an exclusive control of the copyright. In the absence of American editions printed in a form suited for the requirements of the largest number of American readers, the demand on the part of book buyers, whether librarians or individuals, must be supplied with transatlantic editions which, in the majority of cases, are so costly as to be beyond the reach of the larger number of readers. There need be no greater difficulty under a properly worded American statute than obtains to-day (with a similar requirement) in the statute of Great Britain, in securing for the smaller portion of the public, under the permission of the owner of the copyright, copies of transatlantic editions in the cases in which, on one ground or another, such edition is preferable.

"The theory of the librarians that through the undermining of copyright law they can further the supply of good literature, whether in luxurious or in economical editions, is a theory that is based upon an ignorance of the actual conditions of publishing, and an ignorance also of the experience of the States of Europe, Germany, for instance, with freedom from duty on books and on the materials going into books, and with an intelligent, consistent, and equitable copyright statute that secures absolute and exclusive control, and with a booktrade organization (dating back to 1523), that maintains honest and uniform prices, supplies its readers with books that are cheaper in proportion to the value furnished than those in any book markets in the world.

"The authors and the publishers will be well pleased to unite with the librarians in efforts to secure for this country the abolition of all taxes that hinder the production or that increase the cost of books, and to secure at the same time a copyright statute in line with the laws in force in Germany, in France, or for that matter in any of the European States. If these aims can be accomplished, the literary and educational interests of the country will be very much furthered.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL'S REPORT.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL MEYER in his annual report announces that the postal deficit for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1908, amounted to $16,910,279. The receipts were $191,478,663, being $7,893,657 greater than for the previous year, and the expenditures $208,351,886. The deficit, according to the report, is the largest in the history of the department. An analysis of the figures shows that $9,891,321 represents the advance in the rate of pay authorized by Congress for employees of the railway mail service, rural delivery service, city delivery service and assistant postmasters and clerks. The normal increase in the revenue for several years was about 9 per cent., and in 1908 4.29 per cent., the falling off being due to the financial depression.

The report lays special emphasis on the desirability of a special local parcels post, the Postmaster-General being convinced that such a service "confined to rural routes would tend to wipe out the postal deficit and would finally make the rural delivery self-sustaining, besides being of convenience to the farmer and a boon to the retail country merchant." There are now in operation more than 39,000 rural routes, he says, serving a population of about eighteen million, and should an average of fifty-five pounds of merchandise be carried by the rural carrier on each trip throughout the year, it is estimated that $15,000,000 would be realized. The rate would be five cents for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound up to eleven pounds, the maximum weight of a package. With the exception of a small percentage paid to postmasters of the fourth class for increased cancellations, the Postmaster-General points out, all revenue from this parcels post would be clear gain, as there would be no railroad transportation whatever, the service being confined to packages mailed by bona fide merchants and patrons of the rural routes.

COLLECTIONS FOR THE HOSPITAL SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ASSOCIATION.

THE HOSPITAL SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ASSOCIATION in its annual report makes the gratifying announcement that in 1907 the contribution to its excellent work from the publishers and the booktrade in New York City, notwithstanding the financial pressure did not fall far short of its previous contributions, the amount reaching almost $1000. It is to be hoped that with renewed activity in the booktrade its contribution will run well beyond the thousand dollar mark, especially as the demand upon the association hospitals for the free care of patients increases year by year. Should any of the contributors to this fund desire to secure free hospital treatment for some person in whom he is interested, the General Agent, Frederick F. Cook, if addressed by mail, or by telephone, No. "5151 Gramercy," at the office of the Association, will be pleased to give his services toward securing admission for such applicant to one of the Associated Hospitals, if the same be within the rules of this Association and of the hospital to which the application is made. Contributions may be sent to Charles Scribner, George Haven Putnam, George A. Plimpton, care of Ginn & Co., 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City; R. R. Bowker, care THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, or Charles Lanier, the treasurer of the Association, 59 Cedar Street.

SAMUEL B. DONNELLY THE NEW PUBLIC PRINTER.

JOHN S. LEECH has resigned as Public Printer, and President Roosevelt has appointed Samuel B. Donnelly, of New York, to succeed him. Mr. Leech asked to be returned to his former service as Public Printer for the Philippines, and his request was granted by the President. The change took effect December 1.

Mr. Leech was originally employed at the Government Printing Office and was sent to the Philippines, where his work in organizing the public printing service won for him the office of Public Printer of the Philippines. When Charles A. Stillings was retired as Public Printer at the time of the investigation last winter Mr. Leech was appointed his successor.

Samuel B. Donnelly was secretary of the arbitration board of the building trades. He is a practical printer, having been president of Typographical Union No. 6 from 1895 to 1897. Mr. Donnelly is about forty years old and has been a member of the Board of Education for several years. His latest service to the government was his recent trip to the Panama Canal Zone to investigate labor conditions there. He has been prominent in labor affairs about fifteen years.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY IN BOOK AND MAGAZINE WORK.

AN interesting exhibition of color photography and color printing was recently given at the office of Doubleday, Page & Co., New York City. Among those who were invited to inspect the exhibit were many advertising men, general advertisers and publishers.

Hanging about the walls of the room were examples of color work done by the presses of the company. Perhaps the most novel features of the exhibition were a number of Lumiere plates showing photographs of flowers, fruits and country places in natural colors.

The December number of their Country Life in America gives a practical demonstration, both in its reading and its advertising columns, of the Lumiere process of color photography. Hitherto this process has involved certain costly disadvantages, which seemed to stand in the way of its being used as a practical adjunct in the publication of books and magazines. These disadvantages, however, have apparently been overcome, and the result is quite as interesting artistically as it must be to the scientist who has puzzled over the problem of reproducing colors by photographic methods.

In February next Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish C. N. and A. M. Williamson's new book, "The Motor Maid," with colored illustrations produced by the Lumiere process.

EARLY CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

THE Consumers' League of the City of New York has issued the following circular urging everybody to do his or her Christmas shopping early, so that the season may be "merry" for the thousands who work behind the counters. In some form or other this circular should also be circulated among the customers of every bookseller to avoid the congestion and rush from which all retail merchants suffer during the Christmas week, and which by a timely hint such as this might be considerably minimized if not altogether avoided:

Here is the appeal:

Do you realize what the rush of late Christmas shopping means to the workers?

It means not only that you are hurried, worried and tired, but that thousands of men, women and children who work in factories and stores look forward to the holiday season—to Christmas—with dread.

The clerks who serve you at the counters are worn out and often ill from the excessive strain.

The change-makers, bundle-wrappers, packers, and army of workers, whom you do not see, are too exhausted to enjoy any holiday cheer.

Hundreds of drivers and errand boys who are out till midnight or later delivering packages suffer hunger, cold and sleeplessness.

Are you willing that Christmas should mean such hardship to anybody?

Will you buy your Christmas pleasure at such cost of the real holiday spirit?

You can help prevent it by buying early in the season and early in the day.

Do not postpone buying your Christmas presents until the last moment.

Many stores this year are advertising their wares far in advance of the holiday season in order to lessen the Christmas rush.

If the merchants are willing to appeal in behalf of the workers is it not time that we, too, show them intelligent consideration?

If we wish them a merry Christmas, let us show it by shopping before December 15.

SCRIBNER EXHIBIT OF ASSOCIATION BOOKS AND AUTOGRAPHS.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have had on exhibition at their New York store, 153 Fifth Avenue, an interesting collection of Association books, annotated copies, presentation books and other books that derive value through previous ownership. Among these were Prince Albert's copy of Macgillivray's "Natural History of Dee Side and Bræmar," the last completed work of the famous naturalist, which was printed by command of Queen Victoria, who bought the manuscript; Queen Charlotte's copy of "The Memoirs of Robert Walpole;" Dibdin's own copy of his "Bibliomania;" Dumas's own copy of his "La Dame aux Camélias," with a long autograph note relative to the play founded upon this work; Frobisher's copy of Machiavelli's works printed at Palermo, with his autograph which is of superlative rarity; and fifty other rare and interesting books.

At the same time they exhibited a collection of autographs by kings, queens, popes, authors and others, also autograph letters by generals, statesmen, authors, actors, musicians and others. Prominent among these was a "History of the Papacy," from Innocent IV, (1243) to Pius X, the reigning Pope, a collection of sixty-two letters and documents either entirely in the autographs of the popes or signed by them; a "History of France," from Louis XI (1423) to President Fallières, told in autographs and portraits: a similar history of England from Richard III (1452) to Edward VII; the "Barker" collection of Nelson letters; a monumental collection of the autographs of the Bonaparte family; a rare collection of Wagner letters; the Lady Clarendon collection of Washington letters, and nearly two hundred rare items.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN'S LIBRARY.

THE New York Times in its issue for December 4 prints simultaneously with its London namesake a description of J. Pierpont Morgan's library, housed in the white marble palace on East Thirty-sixth Street, near Madison Avenue, in New York City. This is the first description of the library that has been made public with Mr. Morgan's consent, and the world now learns authoritatively that all of Horace Walpole's letters as well as many manuscripts of Byron, Shelley, Samuel Johnson, Dickens, Thackeray, Lamb, Mary Stuart, Lord Cornwallis, Swift, Napoleon, Walter Scott, and many others are among the least noticeable of its treasures. The library contains an unsurpassed collection of fine bindings, including ancient books in ivory, gold, and enamel set with gems. The Caxtons, Aldines, and Gutenbergs, the Elzevirs, and Wynkyn de Worde; the collections of first editions, including the best obtainable copies of all the bibliophiles most approve; the volumes with rich historical associations, the missals and Prayer Books, the early Bibles, the rare prints, the extra-illuminated books, the Chaldean and Babylonian tablets make up the realization of a collector's dream.

"It is too much to expect," as the Times says, "that this treasure house will be thrown open to public examination. But a complete catalogue of its collections, with plates, prepared by an expert bibliophile, would be of great public value and interest."

LORD AMHERST COLLECTION OF CAXTONS.

LORD AMHERST'S fine collection of Caxtons was disposed of at private sale on December 2. Neither the name, nor the nationality of the purchaser, nor the amount paid will be officially disclosed for the present, but it probably will be suggested on all hands that the new owner is that omnivorous purchaser of rare and early printed books, J. Pierpont Morgan, and it has been guessed that the price paid for the books was $500,000.

When the sale of the Amherst library was first announced Mr. Morgan was willing to purchase the Caxtons en bloc, but Lord Amherst was then unwilling to separate them from the rest of the collection. Mr. Morgan was already the owner of between twenty and thirty Caxtons, but many of them are imperfect, and it is certain that such a series as the sixteen Amherst Caxtons cannot appear in the market again for many years.

These sixteen Caxtons were all printed between 1474 and 1493. One of them is the earliest book printed in English, "The History of Troy," a unique copy, which was sold in 1885 for £1820, and another, the next earliest, is "The Game and Play of the Chess," one of five known perfect copies. Most of the others are both perfect and in fine condition.

The collection was begun more than fifty years ago with the definite object of illustrating the history of printing and bookbinding from the earliest times down to 1700, and that by only the best and rarest specimens. It contained besides the Caxtons some of the rarest block books in existence, including a 1460 Catholicon, a 1465 Cicero, and a Mazarin Bible. There were two of the first folios of Shakespeare and a genuine first edition of Milton, and the earliest Continental press is equally well represented.

The dispersal of this magnificent library, which rivals the Ashburnham sale, is the result of Lord Amherst's being defrauded by an absconding solicitor.

The auction sale of the collection began at Sotheby's on the afternoon of December 3. A copy of the so-called Mazarin Bible was sold for $10,250, rather below the average. A small folio volume containing the Apocalypse of St. John and several other fifteenth century works sold for $4000. A copy of the celebrated Cambridge Bible, owned by King Charles I., sold for $5000. An excellent copy of the editio princeps of the first classic ever printed, and containing the first specimens of Greek type, the "Cicero" from the press of Fust and Schoeffer, 1465, a small quarto of eighty-eight leaves, went to Quaritch for $3500, the highest sum ever paid for a copy of this edition, the Sunderland example of which brought $475 at the Ives sale in New York. An English chronicle, printed at St. Albans in 1483, fetched $2000, more than twice as much as another copy bought at the Ashburnham sale.

The sale of the second half of Lord Amherst's library will begin on February 24 of next year.

GOOD PRICES AT THE LAPHAM SALE.

WHAT is said to be a record price was obtained during the first session at the sale of the library of Edwin N. Lapham, at the Anderson Auction Company's rooms, on December 1, for a copy of the rare first edition, in the original calf, of Oliver Goldsmith's "The Vicar of Wakefield. A Tale. Supposed to Be Written by Himself." The work is in two volumes and printed in London in 1776. The last copy is said to have brought $420. F. W. Morris paid $570 for his copy.

G. D. Smith paid $1450 for what is said to be one of the finest copies in existence of "Pickwick," by Charles Dickens, with illustrations by Seymour, "Buss" and "Phiz"—a first edition, with all the original parts.

A presentation copy of "A Christmas Carol" went to G. H. Richmond for $270. It had Dickens's autograph and was given to his literary acquaintance, Albany Fonblanque.

Mrs. Browning's poems attracted some generous bidding. A Philadelphian, Dr. Philip Rosenbach, paid $460 for a copy of her "Sonnets" printed before she decided to have them known as "Sonnets from the Portuguese." Her "Prometheus Bound," an example of the extremely rare first edition which Mrs. Browning suppressed pending a rewriting, went for $53. The original manuscript of "Little Mattie" sold for $130.

There was some spirited bidding over a complete set of first editions of the writings of Charles Lever, fifty-five volumes in all, with all the original covers, wrappers and advertisements bound in at the end. Inlaid in the first volume was an autograph letter from Lever to his publisher, Bentley, discussing a literary proposition. The set was finally knocked down to George D. Smith for $760.

The extremely rare original issue of The Germ, the organ of the famous Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, fetched $210.

Among the rare John Ruskin items was his "Poems," 12mo, London, 1850, the first edition, and a presentation copy from Ruskin's father to Lady Colquhoun. It sold for $390.

Rare first editions of Percy Bysshe Shelley's works sold as follows: "St. Iroyne; or, the Rosicrucian," $330; "Alastor; or, the Spirit of Solitude and Others Poems," binding by Riviere, $190; "The Revolt of Islam," original boards, uncut, $135; "Laon and Cythna; or, the Revolution of the Golden City," $250; "The Cenci, a Tragedy," in five acts, presentation copy from Shelley to his friend, T. F. Hogg, $225; "Adonais, an Elegy on the Death of John Keats," binding by Bedford, $820.

A presentation copy, by Algernon C. Swinburne, of "The Queen Mother, Rosamund," first issue of the first edition, with the autograph inscription "D. G. Rossetti, from his friend, A. C. Swinburne," brought $400.

Among his Alfred Tennyson rarities were "Poems by Two Brothers," first edition, $100; "Helen's Tower," stanzas by Lady Gifford, Claudeboye, Ireland, and ten lines on last leaf by Tennyson, a poem commemorative of the tower erected by Lord Dufferin on his Irish estate in memory of his mother, $390; "The Last Tournament," a trial issue, and extremely rare, $300; "The Cup," privately printed, first edition, $100; "Carmen Salutare," an ode in honor of the jubilee of Queen Victoria, privately printed, first edition, $245. William Thackeray's "Second Funeral of Napoleon," first edition, 12mo, in original gray wrappers, fetched $345; his "Comic Jokes and Sketches," first edition, $127; the original parts of "Vanity Fair," $560, and the first edition of "An Interesting Event," $121.

The library realized a grand total of $31,000. The prices averaged high and a number of new records were made.

MERCHANTS' REDUCED RATES TO NEW YORK IN THE SPRING OF 1909.

THE MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK announces that the Trunk-Line Association has authorized merchants' rates to New York City for the spring, 1909, season. The special fare—a rate and one-half for the round trip—will be in effect under the customary certificate plan from January 16 to 19, inclusive, February 20 to 23, inclusive, March 6 to 9, inclusive, and March 20 to 23, inclusive, with the usual fifteen-day return limit.

In the spring there will be four series of rates aggregating sixteen selling dates compared with only ten selling dates in two series in previous years, making an increase of six days during the coming season when merchants' rate tickets may be purchased. The buying season will also be spread out over a longer period. The greater number of dates have been obtained to accommodate retail merchants in trades whose buying season occurs either earlier or later than the specific dates when rates have been in effect in the past. It is felt that this action will result in increased attendance at the Merchants' Association of New York trade meetings.

Trunk-Line territory, roughly described, is in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, a large part of West Virginia, in Virginia north of and on the line of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, and in the District of Columbia. The reduced rate does not apply from points less than 100 miles from New York City.

An announcement will be made shortly as to the action by the Central Passenger Association on the Merchants' Association's application for rates to New York City from the Central or Middle West.

In view of the fact that the rates are to go into effect in the middle of January, the Association's circulars giving full information will be ready for distribution shortly after the fifteenth of this month.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE BOOK-BINDING CONTROVERSY

The other side of the bookbinding controversy is represented to The Library Journal in the following statement by Mr. Chivers:

My attention has been called to the publication in The Library Journal of the resolutions recently passed by the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York, and to the affidavits from members of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, regarding sending public library books to England for binding.

As some of the statements made appear to be rather misleading, I beg to present the full facts in the case.

From the wording of the affidavits it would seem that I merely have an office at 911-913 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, for the sole purpose of receiving and dispatching bookbinding abroad, and that all the work sent to me is done by aliens.

The truth is, I have here a large book-binding business employing 80 hands, among whom there are only two women and two men who are not American citizens.

My workshop is an "open" one, but some of the men in my employ are union. I make no difference when putting on a workman as to whether he is union or not. The conditions under which my workshops are conducted, with regard to hours and wages, are second to none in advantages to the workers.

It has been complained by the representatives of the Trades Union that New York suffers from the fact that while unemployment is rife, work is being sent away from this city. I wish to submit that this is not a complete or fair statement of the case. Per contra, I am the cause of more bookbinding being done in New York than was done before I established my business, for I am drawing work from other places. My improved methods of work and better materials are the basis of practically a new business in this city, and I repeat, there is today more bookbinding being done here because of my establishment, and not less, as is alleged.

Regarding the sending to England of a portion of the work I receive, the facts are these:

I was invited by a number of the chief librarians of the United States to establish myself in this country for the purpose of binding public library books according to methods and patents which had effected great economies in England and its colonies.

About four years ago I started a book-binding business in New York, and immediately employed a considerable staff of Brooklyn workpeople. My success has enabled me to steadily increase this staff, and they find constant employment with me, up to the present time without a day's loss of time or wages.

But my business has grown so rapidly that I have had more work than it has been possible for me thus far to educate a staff to accomplish here. In spite of one removal, I am now negotiating to enlarge my present premises. All this has rendered it desirable, in order to give prompt service to the libraries, to temporarily avail myself of my English workshops. This temporary help during the costly period of training and establishment here has enabled me to do work at a less cost than would otherwise be possible.

I explained to the trades union delegation when they called at my bindery that having a part of the work done abroad was only a temporary expedient, and that I am rapidly training workers into my special methods and enlarging my premises, in order to do the work in this country. I may add that the ability to send a share of the binding abroad has greatly benefited the public institutions for which I work, because it would have been impossible to establish such methods as I have introduced into bookbinding without such aid.

As to the moral and legal rights of the case, I have always understood that since the Congress left it open for libraries to buy and have their work done abroad it was with the special intention that the kind of business I have been doing should be done so that educational institutions should be advantaged.

I was the first bookbinder to recognize the necessity for re-adapting bookbinding; First, to the severe usage to which books are subjected in public libraries. Before my time, and now beyond the influence of my work, books are bound for hard library service as they are bound for the limited service of the private house.

Second, I have and am adapting the binding of books to the various needs of modern papers, which during the last twenty-five years have varied more in quality than during the previous four hundred years. On both accounts I have made several improvements and introduced new methods in order to meet the necessities of both cases.

The value of these methods and patents has been publicly recognized by the awards of the Gold medal at St. Louis, 1904; Diplome d'honneur at Liege, 1905; Grand prix, at Milan, 1906, and the Grand Prix at the Franco-British Exposition, London, 1908. My examples, also, were considered worthy of public exhibition in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., during 1905, when a showcase containing samples of my improvements was on exhibition during several months.

I set up a standard of work for public libraries in this country, enabling books to serve for very many more issues, and advantaging the lending library system of the United States by giving library books much longer life. In other words, my methods have enabled two books to serve the library where formerly three were used. As a result, thousands of dollars are being annually saved in the libraries; books are enabled to live and serve much longer; more books are bought with the money saved, and the cost of administration is considerably lessened.

OBITUARY NOTES.

GEORGE F. DENNISTON.

His many friends in the trade will learn with regret of the death, after a brief illness, of George F. Denniston, in Pittsburgh, Pa., on November 20. Mr. Denniston was born in New York City about sixty years ago. At the age of seventeen, in the latter part of 1864, during the war between the States, he enlisted in the Federal army, serving in the 193d Penna. Vol. Infantry until the close of the war. When the G. A. R. was formed he became a member of Duquesne Post, 259. In 1873 he connected himself with the firm of S. A. Clarke & Co., publishers and booksellers, afterwards McKnight & Bros., of Pittsburgh. In 1882 he entered the employ of J. R. Weldin & Co., with whom he was associated down to the time of his death. Soon after he joined the forces of Weldin & Co. he was made buyer of their book department, and through this connection was known to probably more representatives of the different publishing houses than any other buyer in the booktrade. He was a recognized authority on both new and old books, and few equalled him in his knowledge of editions, publishers, dates of publication and prices of books that had long ceased to be in general demand. He was easily approached, fair and courteous in all his dealings, and therefore loved and esteemed by all who came into contact with him. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. R. W. Grange, who was assisted by the Rev. Dr. Matthew Riddle. The pallbearers were H. Lee Mason, Jr., Jefft Hewitt, Frank Bruce, Harry F. Davis, Stephen C. McCandless, A. G. Borland, G. C. Kennedy and W. C. McKay. At a special meeting of the Pittsburgh Booksellers' and Stationers' Association, held on November 23, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, We have lost a loyal member and a valued friend in the death of Mr. George F. Denniston,

Resolved, That we extend to his bereaved wife and daughters our heartfelt sympathy, and that we express to them our deep appreciation of his sterling qualities. He has been a faithful member of this Association since its inception, and the purposes for which we are organized always had his devoted support. He has been at all our annual gatherings, and in the future will be sadly missed.

Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon our minutes, and that a copy be sent to the family.

G. H. C.

MISS MARY CRUGER, widely known as a writer, died in her home at the rectory of the Church of the Divine Love, Sunset, near Montrose, N. Y., on November 15, after a brief illness. Miss Cruger was born in the old homestead, near Oscawana, N. Y., May 3, 1834, and was the daughter of Nicholas Cruger and Eliza Kortright. She had resided in that section practically her whole life. Among her books were "Hyperaesthesia," written in 1886; "Den of Thieves," in 1886; "The Vanderhyde Manor House," in 1887; "How She Did It," in 1888, and "Brotherhood," in 1891.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

THE B. C. T.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS held its annual meeting on the evening of December 1, at the Hotel Breslin, the first time since the Brotherhood was founded that it did not meet for this purpose in the Sinclair House, and that for the very good reason that Ashman's famous old hostelry had to give way to the march of civilization, and has during the year been replaced by a sky-scraper office building. A. P. Roche presided. William J. Kelly was elected president to preside at the twenty-fifth dinner to be given next year. John Hovendon was re-elected secretary and Arthur T. Leon was elected vice-president and also re-elected treasurer. The twenty-fourth dinner will be given at the Waldorf-Astoria on December 29.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of The Booksellers' League, on November 30, ten new members were admitted. The annual meeting of the League together with the Ladies' Night, which has become such a popular feature, at the Aldine Association, will be held on the evening of January 20, 1909. Members will be admitted free on their membership cards. Extra tickets for ladies and invited guests will be $2 each. Those wishing to attend are requested to apply as soon as possible to Charles A. Burkhardt, at 31 West Twenty-third Street, New York City.

PITTSBURGH BOOKSELLERS' AND STATIONERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE Pittsburgh Booksellers' and Stationers' Association will give its annual dinner on the evening of January 26.

STATIONERS' ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK.

THE STATIONERS' ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK will give its fourth annual dinner on Wednesday evening, January 13, 1909, at 6:30 P.M., at the Hotel Astor, Broadway and Forty-fourth Street, New York City. The president of the National Association, Thomas L. C. Gerry, will preside. The tables will be arranged for ten persons and the price of the tickets is $4, obtainable of H. W. Rogers at 37 Fulton Street, or of the chairman at 631 Broadway.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

It is now announced that "Henry of Navarre," the novel recently brought out anonymously by G. P. Putnam's Sons, is the work of a lady named Mary Wynne.

SAMUEL CLEMENS, (Mark Twain,) passed his seventy-third birthday quietly at his home at Redding, Conn., on November 30. As was his custom, Mr. Clemens took his morning ride, passing the remainder of the day with his household.

THE transfer tax report on the estate of Bloodgood Haviland Cutter, the Long Island farmer-poet, Mark Twain's "poet lariat," who died in Little Neck on September 6, 1906, was filed in the surrogate's office at Mineola, L. I., on November 27. The taxable personal estate, $484,698, consists mainly of railroad stocks and property mortgages. The real estate, $180,900, is in farm lands at Little Neck and Manhasset, and woodland at Little Neck; $557,556 is exempt from taxation, as it is devoted to bequests to the American Bible Society and other charitable institutions. The rest of the estate was left to relatives.

A DINNER was given at the Hotel Ritz, in London, on the evening of December 1, in honor of Robert Ross, who has just completed his labors as literary executor of the late Oscar Wilde. G. Bernard Shaw was chairman of the committee that organized the dinner and Lord Howard de Walden presided on the occasion. Among the guests was the Duchess of Sutherland. Many people prominent in literary and social circles were present. A cable despatch was sent to John W. Luce & Co., of Boston, congratulating them on having arranged to publish an American edition of Wilde's complete works as edited by Mr. Ross.

OWEN FRAWLEY KILDARE, journalist, author and playwright, the "Bowery Kipling," as his New York friends call him, according to the New York Times is a mental and nervous wreck and has been sent to the Bloomingdale Asylum. Few men have had stranger lives than Owen Kildare. Of it he himself has said: "If lives may be measured by progress, mine may have some interest for you. When a man at thirty cannot read the simplest sentence, and eight years later is able to earn his living by his pen, his story may be worth the telling." He was born June 11, 1864, on the top floor of a typical East Side tenement house in Catherine Street, New York City. His father, Owen Frawley, an Irishman, died three months before he was born, and his mother, Regine Fernault, a French woman, died when he was born. He was adopted by Patrick McShane, a good-hearted neighbor. When old enough to get around he began to sell newspapers, belonging to a gang of newsboys of which "Tim" D. Sullivan, the Congressman, was leader. For a number of years he was a pugilist, professional athlete, filibuster and manager of sporting and theatrical ventures. After that he became freight handler and truck driver. Then came his awakening, and encouraged by a young woman whom he had once protected against the insults of a gang of roughs, who taught him the alphabet, he attended regularly the evening classes of the public schools, the Cooper Union lectures and Y. M. C. A. courses. This was when he was thirty years of age, when he also devoted himself to the practical reform of the slum districts. In 1901 he became a contributor to the New York Herald, Press, Telegraph, World and other journals. Since 1902 he has contributed to Success, Outlook, Independent, Christian Herald, Ladies' Home Journal and Saturday Evening Post, and was also associate editor of Pearson's Magazine. He was engaged in the Brazilian revolution; served in the Légion des Étrangers in Algiers, and took part in the revolution against President Castro of Venezuela. He wrote besides "My Mamie Rose," his autobiography, published in England under the title of "Up from the Slums," the following books: "The Good of the Wicked" and "The Wisdom of the Simple." His plays are "The Tipster," "An Intermezzo," "A Raid on Policy," "The Czar of the Precinct" and "The Regeneration," the recent mutilation of which is said to have been responsible for Kildare's breakdown. The doctors give hopes of his recovery.

PERSONAL NOTES.

McLOUGHLIN BROS. have added to their staff of commercial travellers, headed now by William J. Kelly and Charles E. Miller, the following: E. Condit, of the National Novelty Company; Edward Allen, of Raphael Tuck & Sons Co., and H. M. Everitt, of Frederick A. Stokes Company—a team that will be hard to beat in their lines.

FRANK D. MAHER, who for fifty years has been connected with the counting house of McLoughlin Bros., on November 28 retired from active service. The leave-taking from his old associates, naturally, was very affecting, and the speechmaking halting, but there was a hearty expression of esteem and affection for Mr. Maher from every one and several substantial testimonials of the regard in which he was held by the employees in the New York office and in the factory in Williamsburg.

THE marriage is announced of James K. Sterne to Miss Helen Gugenheim, of San Antonio, Tex., on November 18. Mr. Sterne has been identified with the book business for a number of years, originally in business for himself in Selma, Ala. For three years he has successfully conducted the book business of the Wolff & Marx Company as manager and buyer in San Antonio. On January 1 next Mr. Sterne will assume control of the book and stationery department of Loveman, Joseph & Loeb, at Birmingham, Ala., where he and his bride will take up their residence.

DAVID MCKAY had a real surprise on Saturday evening, November 28, the occasion of his silver wedding. Between six and seven p.m. two men arrived at his house, at No. 1502 North 18th Street, Philadelphia, with a parcel. Mrs. McKay, mistaking them for the grocer's men, whom she was expecting, directed the maid not to admit them by the front door, but to order them to leave their "stuff" at the back door. The two men, however, were not grocers, but John Hovendon and Arthur T. Leon, who were deputed by a number of "Dave's" friends among the commercial travellers and the buyers in the booktrade to present to the silver bride and groom a very handsome chest of silver, as a token of their esteem and friendship. McKay coming in view in the semi-darkness was induced to convince his partner that she was needed in some other part of the house. Then the committee, who were also separated from "Dave's" faithful watch-dog, proceeded to display their gift. Turning on the light the family was summoned to the parlor, and when matters were explained fun was let loose in real earnest. It was only by accident that a few of his friends a short time before learned that McKay thought of celebrating the event quietly with his family. Had it been generally known the biggest hall in Philadelphia would have been needed to hold all the friends of the family who would have been glad to wish them many happy returns of the day.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Munsey's project to publish an afternoon paper on Sundays in Washington, D. C., it appears, is not so novel as was supposed. The Westerley (R. I.) Sun has been coming out Sunday evenings for the last fifteen years.

The Contemporary Review for November, (Leonard Scott Publishing Company,) contains articles on "The Genius of Dickens," by George Barlow; "Harvard and American Life," by Van Wyck Brooks, and "Dante's Intuition of the Infinite," by S. Uduy.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD's new novel, "Marriage à la Mode," will begin in the January number of McClure's Magazine. The theme of the story is international marriage and American divorce. The hero is a young Oxford man who has come to America in search of certain opportunities. For the first time, naturally, Mrs. Ward makes an American girl her heroine, and it is in her masterly portrayal of a fascinating type of American woman that the interest of American readers will centre. It will be curious to watch how she will succeed.

A SPECIAL extra number of The International Studio, just issued, is devoted to "Gardens of England in the Midland and Eastern Counties." This is a companion volume to a previous special extra number, "Gardens of England in Southern and Western Counties." Special facilities have been accorded to the photographers employed in the preparation of this work whereby they have been enabled to obtain a unique and exclusive series of garden subjects from the best and most noted English gardens. The illustrations include seven full-page plates in colors from studies made by George S. Elgood and others. In addition there are 130 full-page plates reproducing photographic studies which will be found particularly valuable as suggestions for the designing and planning of gardens.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CHICAGO, ILL.—The International Post-Card Company has gone into involuntary bankruptcy.

CINCINNATI, O.—The receiver of the Robert Clarke Co. has issued a statement of business done by him from the time of his appointment until October 1, 1908, which, summarized, makes the following showing:

Total Sales..... $40,414.55
Of this amount $9103.60 was uncollected on October 1, 1908.

Paid out for Freight, expressage and postage..... $1,110.20
Merchandise and printing.... 31,911.53
Store expenses, including salaries of employees and rent. 13,913.19

Collected on old accounts..... 6,729.04

According to this it has cost the receiver thirty-five per cent. of the total sales to run the business, not including receiver's fees, court costs or attorney's fees. Comment upon this seems hardly necessary.

DALLAS, TEX.—A. H. Wilkens, of this city, formerly state representative of the American Book Company, is president of the A. H. Wilkens Company, which has recently been incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000, and with headquarters here, to deal in books.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Fire started in the bookstore of Dodd & Bros. on November 14, and caused a loss of $100,000.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—The Ramona Book Store, J. M. Barbour, has been succeeded by the Baker-Wuest Company.

MADISON, WIS.—The Moseley Book Store recently celebrated its fiftieth anniversary.

MARYSVILLE, CAL.—Mrs. C. C. Smith has opened a book and stationery store here. The stock will comprise a full assortment of books, stationery, photographic supplies, notions, Christmas toys and novelties, etc.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Authors and Newspapers Association have removed from Pine Street to larger quarters at No. 68 Murray Street.

NEW YORK CITY.—Mitchell Kennerley has removed to No. 2 East Twenty-ninth, not Twenty-eighth Street, as noted in our issue for November 14.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Outing Publishing Company announces that hereafter their book department will be conducted exclusively at their New York office, 35-37 West Thirty-first Street, and request the trade to address all communications to that address.

NEW YORK CITY.—There has just been opened to the public the first of the chain of stationery stores planned by the International Stationery Company, of New York. The new store of the company is located at 852 Broadway, between 13th and 14th Streets. In outside appearance it closely resembles the United Cigar Stores, which are now familiar in the larger cities. The stock carried at present in the store includes a line of office stationery and type-writer supplies, as well as novelties in metal, leather goods, etc. With each purchase of one dollar's worth of goods in this and future stores operated by this company a coupon or rebate check will be given, representing a value of ten cents. This check is at any time redeemable in making a purchase of a dollar's worth of stationery in the company's stores. In effect, a ten per cent. discount will be allowed on all purchases of one dollar or over. This, it is expected, will attract trade to as great or to a greater extent than any premium plan would. In order to familiarize prospective customers with the plan, rebate checks good for ten cents in purchases of one dollar are being sent out with a letter announcing the opening of the store. Randolph M. Smiley, in the stationery business for twenty-two years at 98 Spring Street, is president of the company. Joseph P. Stearns, the treasurer, has charge of the company's well equipped printing department.

OAKLAND, CAL.—De Witt & Snelling, booksellers, have removed to 9 Telegraph Avenue.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Booklovers Corporation, at 1611 Chestnut Street, of which H. Campbell Black is president, Seymour Eaton, vice-president, and W. F. Smith, secretary, treasurer and managing director, called a meeting of its creditors, which was held on November 17. A report of the action at this meeting is to be published later.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—H. W. Fisher & Co., booksellers, have removed to 214 South Fifteenth Street.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Star Novelty and Post-Card Company has gone into involuntary bankruptcy.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

THE LIBRAIRIE NILSSON, (Per Lamm) Paris, has just brought out the eighteenth volume of the "Catalogue général de la librairie Française," continuing the work of Otto Lorenz, edited by D. Jordell. The volume covers the period from 1900 to 1905, and records 24,000 titles, completing the alphabet from A-H. (804 p. 8°.)

THE new "Catalogue of Books Printed in the Fifteenth Century Now in the British Museum," which has been some years in preparation, and will probably be the most important of its kind in existence, is announced for early publication. It is to be in six parts, the first of which will deal with xylographica and books printed in movable types at Mayence, Strasburg, Bamberg, and Cologne. The 29 plates will give reproductions of upwards of 240 types used at the places named.

In noting the issue of A. C. McClurg & Co.'s "Catalogue of Holiday and Standard Books for 1908-1909," the printer antedated the catalogue a whole century. The mistake was so apparent that it seemed hardly worth while calling attention to it; but as a number of our correspondents seem to be troubled we take this occasion to assure them that the date intended was 1908-1909, and not 1808-1809, even though some of the standard books listed may have been written more than one hundred years ago.

THE CONCORDANCE SOCIETY, which was organized at Yale University two years ago, has brought out through Houghton Mifflin Company, as its first fruits, "A Concordance to the English Poems of Thomas Gray." It is edited by Albert S. Cook, Professor of English Language and Literature at Yale, who is the President of the society. The work of excerpting the material was done by some half a dozen members of the society, including the editor. Gosse's edition of Gray was used as the basis of the Concordance.

A CATALOGUE deserving of particular notice has recently been issued by Pickering & Chatto, of London, England. It contains extended notes on "Books of the Sixties," i.e., books published between 1855 and 1873 in England containing illustrations. While, as is proper in a bookseller's catalogue, the commercial element is present, it is not obtrusive, and the literary quality of the notes to each item is illuminating and very unusual. Though a neglected period now, there are signs that the collector will before long turn his attention to these English wood engravings of the last century. When we note that the catalogue includes the work of such men as D. G. Rossetti, Du Maurier, Caldecott, W. J. Linton, Marcus Stone, Richard Doyle and others of equal celebrity, the supposition is not only reasonable but probable. The trade should send for this catalogue and will find it of educational value.

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.

Edward Baker's Great Book Shop, Birmingham, England, Miscellaneous, including, "The Practical Mechanic Series," etc. (No. 258, 387 titles.)

Who publishes Fitzgerald's "Electric Furnaces"? What is the address of Brain & Co., the publishers? WILLIAMS.

CAN any one give titles of books on Shadowgraphy? COMSTOCK.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY will shortly publish the diary of President Polk, the manuscript of which has recently been acquired by the society.

THE YALE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION, New Haven, Conn., will publish shortly a limited edition of a drama dealing with the career of Nathan Hale, by Charles C. S. Cushing.

THE EVENING WISCONSIN, Milwaukee, Wis., will have ready for distribution January 1 T. S. Andrews's "Sporting Record Book for 1909." The forthcoming issue has been enlarged by many additional records that have never before been published in book form.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have just brought out a "Young People's Story of Music," by Ida Prentice Whitcomb, author of a "Young People's Story of Art," which has been adopted as a text-book by a number of public and private schools. The volume is fully illustrated.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY publish this week "The Monuments of Christian Rome," by Professor Arthur L. Frothingham; the second volume of "Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas," by Professor Edward Westermarck; "The Psychology of Singing," by David C. Taylor; also, "Human Foods and Their Nutritive Value," by Professor Harry Snyder.

G. W. DILLINGHAM Co. are offering $50 for the best opinion of the ending of Frederick R. Burton's story, "Strongheart." The criticism is limited to 200 words and the contest is to close on December 24. The decision will be made by a committee of distinguished literary men and the successful criticism will be published with the author's name and address.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just brought out a colored picture book by Peter Newell, called "The Hole Book." A mischievous boy plays with a pistol, the pistol suddenly goes off and the bullet ploughs its way right through the book, leaving a hole and a great deal of fun in its wake. The book will appeal specially to grown-ups, but the little ones will enjoy it, too.

THE AMERICAN PRESS Co., Baltimore, Md., announce a volume entitled "The Poe Cult, and Other Poe Papers," by Eugene L. Didier, author of a "Life of Edgar A. Poe," etc., who has been a close student of Poe's life and works for upwards of thirty years. His new volume touches upon the most interesting and striking phases of the poet's romantic life, tragical death and his wonderful fame.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY will publish before the end of the year another book for young people, entitled "Children of the Dawn," by E. F. Buckley, who has worked over the legends of old Greece into a form suitable for children and for which F. C. Pape has made some fine pictures. They will also add to their series of Masterpieces in Color volumes on Leonardo da Vinci and Van Dyck.

GINN & COMPANY have just added to their College Series of Latin Authors a volume of "Selected Epigrams of Martial," edited by Edwin Post. The careful annotations which have been made in the editing of this text will make it available for use in an ordinary reading course. Further than this, it will assist in illustrating the epigram as a literary form, and will furnish much light on Roman private life.

THE nineteenth edition of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's "Hugh Wynne," in press, has a preface by the author in which he makes interesting mention of certain alleged mistakes in names, dates, and localities, and explains why after six years of further research one of these alleged mistakes has been corrected, and others have been allowed to stand. Dr. Mitchell's continuation of "Hugh Wynne," "The Red City," went into a second edition before issue.

MITCHELL KENNERLEY has just brought out "Henrik Ibsen, the Man and His Plays," a critical and biographical work by Montrose J. Moses, who takes up each of the dramas of Ibsen separately and describes it as to its stage history as well as from the standpoint of the dramatic and literary critic. Mr. Kennerley has also just ready a novel by John Campbell Haywood, entitled "The Silver Cleek," which is described as being a "golf story in eighteen holes."

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have brought out a Holiday edition of Thoreau's "Cape Cod," illustrated with reproductions of photographs made by Clifton Johnson, following as closely as possible the path Thoreau took and striving all the while to see the things Thoreau saw and described; and "Pelleas and Melisande," translated by Erving Winslow, with an introduction by Montrose J. Moses and illustrations of scenes from the opera and portraits of Miss Garden.

F. D. TANDY Co., 38 East Twenty-first Street, New York City, have four items that should interest lovers of Lincoln, namely, "The Autobiography of Lincoln," his own life in his own words; "An Anthology of the Epigrams and Sayings of Abraham Lincoln," collected from his writings; "The Complete Works of Abraham Lincoln," edited by Nicolay and Hay, which they sell by arrangement with the Century Company; also, Lincoln portraits suitable for framing.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have just brought out "The American Executive," by John H. Finley, president of the College of the City of New York, and the Hon. Charles C. Nott's "The Mystery of the Pinckney Draught," a study of a mooted point in constitutional history. A large new edition of "The Lady of the Decoration," just sent to press, makes the thirtieth printing of this seemingly perennial favorite. Another new edition of Jennette Lee's "Uncle William," too, is on the press.

JOHN LANE COMPANY have just ready a new book by Lawrence Gilman, entitled "Aspects of Modern Operas," in which he discusses such topics as: "The Wagnerian Aftermath," "A View of Puccini," "Strauss' 'Salome,' its art and its morals," and "A Perfect Music Drama." They are going to press with William J. Locke's latest novel, "Septimus," now running to a close in The American Magazine. The advance orders indicate that there will be a large demand for the book when published.

RAND, McNALLY & Co. have just brought out a delightful book for young people, entitled "Peter Pumpkin in Wonderland," by Ida M. Huntington, with illustrations by Mary Isabel Hunt. The author's hero is a very boy-like boy, and she gives him seven dream experiences, imaging seven of the well-known holiday seasons in the year. Some of them instil lessons of love of country in a way to stamp them for lifetime in the child's memory. All of them are rarely imaginative and wholesome in the impression they will leave in the young mind.

ERNEST DRESSEL NORTH, 4 East Thirty-ninth Street, New York City, has republished Whistler's "Ten o'Clock," reprinted from the special limited edition printed some years ago by the Marion Press at Jamaica, L. I. The publication is made by arrangement with Mr. Whistler's executors and is limited to an edition of one thousand copies. The attractive typographical form of the original has been preserved, and the renewal of interest in Mr. Whistler brought about by the publication of the Pennell biography will no doubt attract attention to this admirable compendium of the artist's views upon art.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have just ready Paul Leroy Beaulieu's work, "Collectivism," which takes a historic survey of the various collectivist movements, besides analyzing them from the standpoint of what they intrinsically teach, translated and abridged by Sir Arthur Clay; a new edition of Sir Howard Plunkett's "Ireland in the New Century, with an Epilogue in Answer to Some Critics;" also, "A Church Calendar, According to the Usages of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, 1909," published with the approval of the Right Rev. David H. Greer, D.D., Bishop of the Diocese of New York.

THE MAYHEW PUBLISHING COMPANY, Boston, has brought out "A Pilgrim's Progress in Other Worlds," the story of a man who built a flying machine, furnished it like a hall bedroom in a boarding house, victualled it for an indefinite time, and set forth, to land on the "lost star Eden," which is war—or its equivalent. He goes to other places in a purely unscientific and unimaginative manner, and returns after ten years, to "smash up" on his own Indiana farm, and to eat his Christmas dinner at his wife's side. The amusing thing in the book is the hero's name, U-ly-sum. By thus carefully dividing it the amusement may be obtained; otherwise the tale is serious, or seriously intended.

THE NEWOLD PUBLISHING COMPANY, 225 Fifth Avenue, New York City, have brought out, in two neat volumes, an India paper edition of Poe's works. This edition was originally brought out by A. S. Barnes & Co. in four volumes. These four volumes, which are now bound in two volumes, bound in flexible morocco, contain all the tales, romances, essays and poems, with introductions, notes and sketches by Richard Henry Stoddard, James Russell Lowell, N. P. Willis and G. Mercer Adams. There are four full-page tinted half-tone illustrations, including a portrait of Poe and several facsimiles. In view of the coming centenary of Poe's birth this edition should readily find many buyers.

THE popularity of George P. Upton's handbook, "The Standard Operas," is evidenced by the announcement of A. C. McClurg & Co., that they are just putting to press the fifth printing of the new illustrated edition. This edition was first issued in October, 1906, at which time the book was entirely rewritten and illustrations added. The work originally was published in 1885, was revised in 1896, then reset in 1906, and the present is the twenty-fourth edition of the book since the beginning. In this connection Mr. Upton's new book, "The Standard Concert Guide," bids fair to attain the same popularity as the "Operas," and his recently published volume of reminiscences, "Musical Memories," has been pronounced one of the rarest books of its kind of recent years.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS is about to publish a work entitled "Fonts and Font Covers," by Francis Bond, a companion volume to that author's "Screens and Galleries in English Churches." The last general account of fonts given was that by Mr. Paley in his introduction to the collection of 123 fonts made by T. Combe in 1844; and there exists no conservative account of the very beautiful font covers which survive of Gothic and Renaissance design. Mr. Bond treats his subject historically, showing side by side the gradual modifications of doctrine and ritual which obtained in the mode of administration of the rite of baptism and the steady deterioration of its material surroundings. There are upwards of 400 illustrations showing fonts and font covers of all periods.

WORTHINGTON CHAUNCEY FORD, chief of the division of manuscripts in the Library of Congress, has just been elected to an important office in the Massachusetts Historical Society. It is nominally that of editor, but with authority beyond the implication of that term. Mr. Ford will leave for the new post in Boston on January 1. He began his service with the library in 1902. As an authority on the sources of American history he has not merely administered the collection, but has been greatly influential in increasing them. He edited (through the first dozen volumes) the journals of the Continental Congress, of which the originals are in the library, and of which only portions heretofore had been published. Mr. Ford's successor will be Gaillard Hunt, chief of the Bureau of Citizenship of the State Department.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY will publish at once an appreciation of James Robertson, by Ralph Connor, (Dr. Charles W. Gordon.) Robertson was the superintendent of Presbyterian Missions in Western Canada, and he is was who brought Dr. Gordon out to know the Red River, and Black Rock region and the Kootenay ranges, where "The Sky Pilot" and "The Doctor" all fought their dramatic battles for civilization. Dr. Gordon has unbounded and contagious admiration for Robertson, and predicts that his fame will be far greater fifty years from now. He sees him a man of far seeing, sound judgment, an enthusiast on the possibilities of Western Canada, a genius at handling crowds of miners, railroad navvies and cattlemen, with indefatigable energy for travel and administration, and a never failing sense of humor.

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY announces that the Rev. Samuel Zane Batten's new book on "The Christian State," which was to have been ready before Christmas, will not be published until January. It will be a careful study of the social and political questions as related to Christianity, a subject to which the author has given long attention. They have just brought out "The Forward Movement Hymnal," for use in missionary meetings, Sunday-schools, mission concerts, mission circles and Young People's Societies. It is believed that this collection will enable leaders to make the musical part of missionary meetings interesting and inspiring. Every hymn in the little book is worthy to be sung and known. Some of the new hymns are most effective.

THE C. M. CLARK PUBLISHING Co. have just ready a companion volume to "Little Betty Marigold," published last year, in "Little Polly Primrose," another story of flowers transformed into little girls and teaching lessons of good behavior; also, a group of five novels, three of the Revolution—"The King's Mark," by Ella Mathews Bangs; "Arnold's Tempter," by Benjamin Franklin Comfort; "Nancy Hart," by Robert L. Freear; "The Rose of Sharon," a story of to-day, and "The Twelfth Juror," by Miss Mary Harriott Large, a Cumberland Mountain story. They will publish shortly "Letitia," by Charles A. Macfarlane, a story partly of the lumber trade and partly of the adventures of a Vermont journalist in search of a millionaire's missing heir; "The Heart of the People," by J. R. Abarbanell, the translator of Daudet's "Sappho," also, "My Soldier Lady," by Miss Ella Hamilton Durley.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD & Co. have published a tract entitled "The South: Shall it ever become so far civilized to be fit for a republican form of government, obedient to the Constitution and the laws, and pervaded by such public opinion as shall enforce this true citizenship? or shall we for another seventy-five years be subject to its vicious legislation, its turbulence and its wars? answer—the Dingley Tariff, causing the development of the vast mineral and other resources of the southern states, through work and wages, nearer and greater markets, wealth and power, is solving this supreme national problem, unsolved for 125 years of independence . . . addressed, in criticism of his economic views and recommendations, to President Roosevelt, by way of warning," by Henry Carey Baird. The tract will be sent free to any one who will send his address to Mr. Baird at 810 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE BALL PUBLISHING COMPANY have just brought out two little books by H. G. Wells, "The Misery of Boots" and "Socialism and the Family," two Socialist tracts, the first of which, notwithstanding G. Bernard Shaw's protest, is published in England by the Fabian Society, the latter, however, only in this country. They have also just ready Melvin L. Severy's "Gillette's Industrial Solution: World Corporation," which claims to be "the presentation of an entirely new remedy for the evils exhibited by the existing social system." They expect to publish shortly "The Page and the Prince," by Charles Phillips Chipman, author of "Two Boys and a Dog," and son of the veteran writer of books for boys. The story is the familiar tale of the princely heir who returns from exile to drive out the usurper, save that it lacks a beautiful bride for the hero, and the boys will hardly miss her, for the adventures are lively.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have just brought out a new book for young people by Josephine Scribner Gates, entitled "The Live Dolls' Play Days," whose series of "live dolls" have proved immensely attractive to little girls. The idea developed in the days when Mrs. Gates was telling stories to her own little girl, who, like most little girls, was immensely fond of dolls and simply captivated by the thought of their coming to life. The other children in the neighborhood were summoned to hear "The Story of Live Dolls" and they were equally delighted. Then, one day, Mrs. Gates happened to meet Virginia Keep, the artist, who begged her to write it down and let her illustrate it. Which she did, and the lucky publisher made it into a book, which "took on" at once. Each year since has seen a new "live dolls" book. "The Live Dolls' Play Days" concern the battle of the "Teddy Bears" and the "live dolls" for supremacy.

THE WHITAKER & RAY COMPANY, of San Francisco, Cal., are rapidly reprinting the books destroyed in the San Francisco fire. Their list of valuable bookplates destroyed was very large, and while many of the books will remain permanently out of print, a number of them will be issued in a short time. The most important will be the collected poems of Joaquin Miller. This will doubtless be the final revision of the poet's works, and will be known as the Author's edition, in five volumes. It will be printed on deckle paper and neatly bound. The first volume will contain almost entirely new matter, and a large part of it will be devoted to an autobiography of the writer. Each volume will contain an appropriate frontispiece, picturing the poet in various poses and scenes. A limited edition de luxe, on fine paper, and beautifully bound in leather, will be issued and sold with the author's autograph. It is expected that three volumes will be ready early this month.

W. A. WILDE COMPANY, Boston, have just marketed the 1909 volumes of Peloubet's "Select Notes on the International Sunday-School Lessons." This is the thirty-fifth annual issue, and few books are to-day better known to the trade throughout the English-speaking world. They have also just ready two volumes for little folks—"How Richard Won Out," a story by Mary Knight Potter, and "The Dolls' Story Book," edited by Mary I. Lovejoy, containing stories of dolls written for the little folks and illustrated by many full-page colored pictures; also, four volumes for boys and girls entitled "The Trail of the Badger," a story of Colorado life by Sidford F. Hamp, in the series of Stories on Western Life; "Six Girls Growing Older," by Marion Ames Taggart, third volume in the Six Girls series; "The Turn of the Tide," by Eleanor H. Porter, a sequel to "Cross Currents;" and "New Little Americans," by Mary Hazelton Wade, stories of the children living in our new possessions under the Stars and Stripes.

OLIVER DITSON COMPANY have just brought out in their Musicians' Library the second volume of "Bach's Piano Compositions," edited by Ebenezer Prout. The first volume of these compositions consisted entirely of short pieces, the majority of which were in various dance forms, and, for the most part, of no great technical difficulty. The present volume contains a selection of Bach's larger and more important compositions for the piano. The introductory essay gives some general hints to students on the phrasing, the notation, the ornaments, the text and fingering of these pieces to which the editor adds short notes on the pieces and a bibliography. They have also just published in their Dollar Books of Piano Music the first volume of "Piano Compositions by Louis Moreau Gottschalk." The volume contains sixteen of the more famous compositions of Gottschalk, including "America," "Last Hope," "The Maiden's Blush," and other favorite pieces. A biographical sketch by William A. Fisher adds value to the book for permanent reference.

THE TORCH PRESS BOOK SHOP, Cedar Rapids, Ia., will publish shortly "Hawthorne and His Friends," by F. B. Sanborn, a study of Hawthorne and his New England contemporaries, by one thoroughly conversant with that period, with an unpublished portrait of Una Hawthorne; "Bronson Alcott and His Fruitlands Experiment," also by Mr. Sanborn, who gives an interesting account of one of the earliest American attempts at experimental socialism and its final outcome as exhibited in the work of A. Bronson Alcott and his coadjutors; "David Swing: Poet-Preacher," a biography of Chicago's great preacher and essayist, written from the family archives by J. F. Newton; also, "Life and Times of Anne Royall," by Sarah Harvey Porter, an intimate account of one of the most representative newspaper women of her day, who met personally and talked with every man who became President of the United States from Washington to Lincoln. They announce that the publication of "Dyer's Compendium of the War of the Rebellion" has been delayed until January.

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. have just ready a new novel by John Trevena, whose "Furze the Cruel" made so profound an impression in England and in this country. The new story is entitled "Arimel of the West," and unlike "Furze" it is remarkable for its light, dainty touch, its idyllic love, the beauty and the indescribable zest and charm of its characters and incidents. It is one of the most charming love stories of years, and emphasizes Mr. Trevena's remarkable appreciation of women. They have also just ready a new book by Dr. Elwood Worcester, the rector of Emmanuel Church, entitled "The Living Word." "For the past generation," says Dr. Worcester in the preface of this book, "men have been groping for a theology which shall approach the old mysteries of God, evil, the soul, and immortality from the point of view of modern scientific and philosophic thought. The old transcendent conception of God has yielded to the immanent. The thought of God as a mere ruler and judge is no longer sufficient for men's needs. Science has discovered God at work, and religion also craves a spiritual and an active deity who works through laws and through us. Although this simple volume makes absolutely no claim to be a compendium of theology, it does attempt to grapple with some of the greatest problems of that great science, the nature of God, and God's relation to the soul." They closed their season's publications last week with the issue of these books. Notwithstanding the panic, the year just closing has been greatly the largest in the firm's history. Beginning with last February, the firm states, it has consistently made a new record of book sales every month.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just brought out a new novel by George W. Cable, entitled "Kincaid's Battery," a story of life in New Orleans just before and during the war between the states, in which he tells of matters and scenes which he knew at first hand. No story since "The Cavalier" has so vividly and realistically brought home the period of the early sixties in the South, and the absorbing romance which develops during the book makes this a novel of vital and deep interest. They have also just ready an important book on "Modernism," by Paul Sabatier, author of "The Life of St. Francis of Assisi." Those who view with keen interest the movement toward liberty of thought and action to which the Pope has given the name of "Modernism," will find in Sabatier's lectures a profoundly sympathetic account of it by one who, though not a Roman Catholic, is in close touch with the most influential Modernists, and is singularly fitted by his temperament and studies to interpret their aims and aspirations. Sabatier shows the growth of Modernism in all European countries, though especially in Italy and France, explains the attitude and mentality of the Pope and his advisers, and gives his reasons for believing that the Roman Church is destined to be transformed and regenerated by this, the most significant religious movement of our time. The book is provided with a preface and notes and the full text of the Bull Pieni L'Animo, the Decree Lamentabili, and the Encyclical Pascendi Dominici Gregis. "The Thackeray Pocket Book," by Adelaide Rawnsley Fossard, also just ready, contains quotations and selections from the novels and essays of Thackeray along the same lines and in the same form as "The Pocket R. L. S." and "The Meredith Pocket Book." Thackeray's brilliant and profound observations on life and the world, men, manners, society, love and death have been chosen and arranged topically with great skill and tact by the editor.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just brought out a unique volume in "The Lincoln Centennial Medal." The volume presents the famous Roiné medal of Lincoln. Roiné was born in the Department of the Loire, in 1858, and while still a young man became a student of Léopold Morice, of Paris. His first reputation, at least outside of France, came to him through the exquisite reproduction in bas-relief of the "Aurora of the Twentieth Century," which he had designed for the Paris Exposition in 1900, and for which he received from the French government a gold medal. A replica of this has been secured for the Gold Room of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, the original being in the Luxembourg Gallery in Paris. Among his medallic work the Lincoln medallion included in this volume has found great favor and, in the opinion of authorities, will remain the authoritative medallic presentation of the great American. It is presented in bronze and in 100 silver copies. On February 12, 1909, the dies of the medal will be cancelled and then deposited in the collection of the American Numismatic Society. After that date no more copies of the medal or of the book will be made. The book contains, besides the medal, the most noteworthy and characteristic utterances of Abraham Lincoln, including "Letter to Horace Greeley," of August, 1862, in regard to the question of Emancipation; "Letter to General Joseph Hooker," of January, 1863, at the time of Hooker's appointment to command the army of the Potomac; "Letter of November, 1864, to Mrs. Bixby," the mother of five sons who had been killed during the war; the Second Inaugural Address delivered March 4, 1864; the Emancipation Proclamation of September 22, 1862, and the Gettysburg Address, November, 1862. To these papers are added "The Lincoln Centennial," a critical essay, by Richard Lloyd Jones; also, "The Lincoln Medal and the work as medalist of Edouard F. Roiné," by Professor George N. Olcott, of Columbia University.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY will publish on December 15 a drama by William Vaughn Moody, entitled "The Faith Healer," which is said to be as absorbing as the author's first play, "The Great Divide," while in its vital relation to some of the widespread intellectual movements of the day it has deeper significance and a more compelling message; "Herakles," by George Cabot Lodge, a dramatic poem in twelve scenes; "The Woman of Corinth," by Hermann Hagedorn, a romantic poem telling the story of the conflict between an oriental warrior's love and his duty as leader of his army; "Poems of American History," by Barton G. Stevenson, a storehouse of hundreds of favorite poems on the history of our country from 1492 to the present day; also, the first complete and definitive edition of the poems of E. C. Stedman, in which is included a number of poems in manuscript and important pieces gathered from magazine sources. They have also brought out a Christmas book of unusual quality and attractiveness, entitled "By the Christmas Fire," by Samuel M. Crothers, author of "The Gentle Reader," etc., who writes of Christmas and the literature of disillusion, of Christmas and the democratic spirit, and of other allied topics, with a delicate suggestiveness and imaginative charm that will give pleasant and memorable hours to many readers; "Wisconsin," by Dr. Reuben G. Thwaites, a new volume in the American Commonwealth Series, giving an account of one of the most interesting and romantic commonwealths of this country that will appeal not only to the people of Wisconsin, but to every student of American history; "The History of the Boston Theatre," by Eugene Tompkins and Quincy Kilby, with portraits and other illustrations; "The Mystery of Golf," by Arnold Haultain, which will appeal not to golfers only, as Walton's "Compleat Angler" did not appeal to anglers only, or White's "Selborne" to naturalists only; also, a limited Riverside Press Edition of "Geoffroy Tory," by Auguste Bernard, translated by George B. Ives, with illustrations.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just published "Camps and Cruises of an Ornithologist," by Frank M. Chapman, Curator of Birds in the American Museum of Natural History in New York City. For past eight years, accompanied by artist and preparateur, Mr. Chapman, encouraged and supported by friends interested in his work, devoted all of each nesting season of the birds to making the field studies on which this series of groups is based. In 1906, for example, he travelled 13,000 miles through our Western States, and in 1907 he began the year's work in the Bahamas in March, and, following the advance of the season, reached Florida in April, South Carolina in May, the plains of Saskatchewan in June, and the snow-covered summits of the Canadian Rockies at the birth of the Alpine spring in July. In all, over 60,000 miles have been covered, the trail leading from the Bahamas to Canada, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and even into England. Some of the places visited were easily reached, others were difficult of access and required journeys by land or sea, entailing no little hardship and danger. The story of these eight years' experiences as told by Mr. Chapman in "Camps and Cruises of an Ornithologist," possesses the charm of a tale of travel and adventure, together with the interest aroused by the description of some of the most wonderful sights in the world of birds. At the same time, the book has the value of an authoritative account of the regions visited as well as of the birds studied. The illustrations, over 250 in number, are from Mr. Chapman's photographs. They have also just brought two editions of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass," and two editions of his complete prose works. Five photogravures are contained in the library edition of "Leaves of Grass." The text of the latter is given in complete and unexpurgated form. The plates from which these editions were made have been recently purchased from Small, Maynard & Co.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY will publish at once an edition of Richard Burton's distinguished biblical drama, "Rahab," illustrated from pictures of Donald Robertson's production of the play, which is being given in repertoire by his company in Chicago and on the road. The play bill of the first performance will also be included. They announce the publication of "Yvan Gall," a story by Gabriel Compayré, who has long been known to American educators as the author of pedagogical works that are widely used in this country. Professor O. B. Super, of Dickinson College, has edited with vocabulary for the use of beginners, this unusually interesting tale of a boy's trip around the world, which is written in simple and delightful French, and gives incidentally a great deal of geographical and miscellaneous information. The elaborate illustrations and other features of Mr. Krehbiel's "Chapters of Opera" have forced the Holts to delay publication until to-day, when they also bring out Eggeling and Ehrenberg's "Freshwater Aquarium." They have just concluded arrangements with Charles Frederick Carter for a somewhat more than usually interesting book, entitled "When Railroads Were New," which tells the full story of our first railroads with much picturesque detail. The illustrations will be a special feature, in many instances the early engines, etc., being shown in action, with people and landscapes. Further details regarding this book, which will not be issued till February, are at present lacking. They also announce a little book which should prove invaluable to every beginner in French in the form of "French Word-Lists" by B. Frank Carter, of the Stevens School of Hoboken, N. J. This is a collection of about two thousand of the most commonly-used French words, classified according to the objects or ideas which they represent, and containing also the commonest French idioms and proverbs. Perhaps no one feature of it will appeal more strongly to the teacher than the list of words resembling English words but with different meaning.

David Swing, Poet-Precacher

A Biography. By J. F. NEWTON. 8vo, cloth, $2.00 net (postpaid $2.18).

The life of Chicago's greatest preacher and essayist written from the family archives.

Life and Times of Anne Royall

By SARAH HARVEY PORTER. 8vo, cloth, $1.50 net (postpaid $1.64).

As the representative newspaper woman of her day, and as one who was more intimate with the development of our national life than any other of her sex, the name of Mrs. Royall is pre-eminent. She met personally and talked with every man who became President of the United States, from Washington to Lincoln; and her inimitable pictures of noted Americans are of intrinsic value. Living in the formative period of our life as a nation, she understood thoroughly and wrote intelligently of the burning topics of the day.

Such a busy and important life as that of Mrs. Royall should not pass into oblivion; and the author has spared neither time or effort to make the volume authentic as well as readable and entertaining.

JUST FULL OF GOOD THINGS

IS OUR

CHRISTMAS LIST!

THE MOST IMPORTANT BIOGRAPHY OF THE YEAR

AUTHORIZED BY WHISTLER

The Life of James McNeill Whistler

By ELIZABETH ROBINS PENNELL
and JOSEPH PENNELL

In two volumes with 166 illustrations in half-tone, photo-gravure and line. Crown quarto. Half cloth, $10.00 net, per set.

"Will prove indispensable to anyone who is interested in the artist's life and personality. Mr. and Mrs. Pennell have done a conscientious and thorough piece of work which cannot be too highly praised. They have collected a surprising amount of material regarding Whistler that is of importance."

—New York Sun.

A GIFT BOOK THAT WILL DELIGHT AND CHEER

My Lady of the Fog

By RALPH HENRY BARBOUR

With twelve full page illustrations in color and tint by CLARENCE F. UNDERWOOD, and exquisite page decorations throughout. Small 4to. Decorated cloth, with medallion in colors, $2.00. In a box.

"A distinctly holiday book, a gift-book for those who are looking for something that combines a pretty story, good colored illustrations, and a binding that is decorative."—Chicago Tribune.

"A volume made in a style that will appeal to lovers of books beautiful."—Nashville American.

THE GIFT FOR A TRAVELLING FRIEND

An English Honeymoon

By ANNE HOLLINGSWORTH WHARTON

A companion volume to "Italian Days and Ways." Sixteen illustrations in double-tone. 12mo. 306 pages. Cloth, $1.50 net.

"Under the beguiling title of 'An English Honeymoon,' Anne Hollingsworth Wharton describes a series of pretty or interesting scenes in England. It's very much like seeing these old places with one's own eyes to visit them with Miss Wharton—homes of authors, painters, poets, towns, inns, cathedrals and churches, etc."—Philadelphia Evening Times.

SHOULD YOUR CUSTOMER DESIRE CHOICE FICTION

The Princess Dehra

(FOURTH EDITION IN PRESS)

By JOHN REED SCOTT

Author of "The Colonel of the Red Huzzars" and "Beatrix of Clare."

One of the best-selling novels

"Since Hope's 'Prisoner of Zenda,' nothing better has been done than this new story by the author of 'The Colonel of the Red Huzzars.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Colored illustrations by CLARENCE F. UNDERWOOD. 12mo. Decorated cloth, $1.50.

Marcia Schuyler

(FOURTH EDITION)

By GRACE LIVINGSTON HILL LUTZ

The Chicago Tribune pronounces Marcia "One of the most lovable heroines that ever lived her life in the pages of a romance."

Frontispiece in color by ANNA WHELAN BETTS, and six illustrations from paintings by EDWARD L. HENRY.

12mo. Cloth, with medallion, $1.50.

A BOOK FOR THE REAL LIVE BOY

Daniel Boone: Backwoodsman

By C. H. FORBES-LINDSAY

Author of "John Smith: Gentleman Adventurer." Frontispiece in color and three illustrations. 12mo. Cloth, $1.50.

"Historical fact is made the basis of convincing fiction, and a better book of its kind could not be placed in the hands of any American boy. Boone stands out as a splendid figure of pioneer manhood, who performed a work of incalculable importance in the settlement of Kentucky by white men. Of course a young hero is introduced who figures as a companion and lieutenant of Boone. True narrative impulse enters into the story."—Philadelphia Press.
